This game is definitely enjoyable, but I'm not sure I see too much skill involved as far as controls. I've only been playing for a few weeks, but so far, it seems as though gameplay just consists of spam buttons. It is extremely difficult to overcome an enemy that has had a better start than you, which gets frustrating sometimes. As a long time Vainglory player, the action spamming in this game is quite enjoyable for a change, but once you've played for a few days, there isn't too much strategy and skill involved, unlike Vainglory. Once you understand your heroes abilities, and the fun of spamming the "attack" button with Valhein starts to wear off, the game starts to lose some fun. Also, in the rare occasion that both teams are pretty equal, late game is a little annoying. Both teams just bunch up in middle lane and try to push, which takes forever, and I feel like the game doesn't move forward. I mean, both teams can just keep killing each other forever, so I feel like this game is in need of something like the "kraken from Vainglory". Although it does have the dragons, they do not really change the flow of the game as much as I would hope. However, I love the colorful roster of heroes and the 5v5 action. Overall, I feel as though this game is only really fun on the winning team, but has great potential with the wonderful heroes, so far so good community, and well known developer. Hope this helps thanks! Hi there, thanks for taking the time to leave your review! Even if you're finding some aspects of the game a bit rough at the moment, we really do appreciate you leaving your feedback with us. In this case I can certainly see about passing the points you've raised on to our development team, so that way they can review it prior to future adjustments to the game.
