return. In store return, I think they would give you a physical gift card that wouldn't be prone to whatever vulnerability apparently exists in the online returns platform. I recently found this out the hard way, not having bought one for a couple years. There is a number of threads on Reddit about this that I only seen after I had issues. If you buy something online and return it to a store, you will receive a new digital gift card sent by the system. This is the one that is likely to be stolen/compromised. I bet their entire stack of blank cards have been copied down. To use a physical gift card, you just scan the card at the terminal. No need for a pin. They are easy to steal. Even a picture of the card will do. Nov 20th, 2024 2:45 pm soymilkslam wrote: I think you have it backwards? If you read through this thread, there is a lot of anecdotal evidence pointing to the fact the the eGC's issued by walmart's online return system are somehow vulnerable to being drained. As a general statement it is true that physical GC is less secure than eGC, but not when the system which is issuing the eGC for the return is compromised. Often when I load a product, it pops up a "Verify Your Identity" captcha page and you are asked to PRESS AND HOLD a button to get a Checkmark. I do this, I get the checkmark, but it pauses and then errors out with a "Please try again" error in red. Rinse and repeat this in an endless loop. And I've tried this on multiple browsers and computers, all with the same result - at some point I get the dreaded Captcha screen and I can't get out. I have also noticed that many companies stupidly block IPs (home users share dynamic IPs), so I may have just got a bad Bell IP that some nimrod was hammering for a PS5. It also could be traffic-related, with the constant PS5 pinging and traffic overloading the Walmart captcha system. Anyone else experiencing this? If using chrome, you may have unpinned UO icon from your upper toolbar. You can always go into extensions and pin it back. Once you have the UO Red Shied icon, in there you should find the big ON/OFF button which you can use to toggle it on/off for the site you are on. Note that if you toggle it off then on again, those cookies that now Walmart has successfully written, remain cached until you delete them manually or if you have the option set to clear cache when you close your browser. (Meaning that if you toggle it off then on again, Walmart may still be able to read those cookies it stored when UO was off, and thus temporarily not bother with these verification attempts). I don't know what they do, but UO reports up to 80-90 blocked attempts. Likewise, you don't even need to have an Ad Blocker installed to get into this nonsense. All you need is to have cookies and maybe even 3rd party cookies disabled in you browser. Offer valid for new customers. Applies to online grocery orders only. Walmart reserves the right to modify this offer. Personally tested and it works! If you want $2 extra dollars in your pockets, MINI68 still works. Get $17 off On orders of $75 or more (before taxes & fees). Cheers! None of my orders have ever been cancelled entirely, but I have noticed idiosyncrasies when ordering pickup at different branches. Some branches will give you replacements even if you didn't ask for it, some will fulfill your order entirely but then tell you at pickup the items aren't available and they'll refund it after pickup. Not sure what was the actual reason but I suspect when order is placed using expired codes or account is flagged by their system. I just created a new account with new email and different phone number and it worked afterwards. No more cancellation.
