

Mount Robson Park's flora and fauna epitomize the western slope of the Rocky Mountains, North Continental Range. On some trails, you can travel between three different vegetation zones during a day-hike. Berg Lake trailhead is conveniently located 5 minute drive from our lodge. More than 182 species of birds have been documented in the park. All wildlife indigenous to the Rocky Mountains can be found here. Mule and whitetail deer, moose, elk, and black bears call the lower elevations home. Grizzly bears, caribou, mountain sheep inhabit the higher elevations. In more than 217,000 hectares of mostly undisturbed wilderness, wildlife populations are allowed to ebb and flow with minimal intervention from humans. There are excellent wildlife viewing opportunities throughout the park. From mountain goats on the many cliffs and rockslides to moose in low wetland areas, patient observers will be well rewarded. Park Contact & Reservation Information Visit camping.bcparks.ca or call the reservation call centre at 1-800-689-9025 toll free from Canada and the US or 1-519-858-6161 internationally. For more information on Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, be sure to check out our blog category, Mount Robson, British Columbia Travel & Tourism Guide On July 29th, 1913, Conrad Kain, W.W. "Billy" Foster, and Albert "Mack" MacCarthy made the first successful ascent to the top of the most prominent peak in North America's Rocky Mountain range - Mount Robson. The trio would spend thirteen hours "of strenuous fighting up rock cliffs and dangerous slopes of snow and ice" and cut sixteen hundred steps with an ice axe before reaching the summit. Kain would later describe Mount Robson as "one of the most beautiful mountains in the Rockies." Mount Robson Provincial Park, which was established earlier the same year, is the second oldest park in the British Columbia's park system and spans an impressive 225,777 hectares, most of which is undisturbed wilderness. The first inhabitants of the Mount Robson region were the Texqakallt First Nation, who lived and thrived near the headwaters of the Fraser River. In 1820, one of the early 1900s, the Grand Trunk Pacific was built through Yellowhead Pass. In 1990, Mount Robson was included in the Canadian Rocky Parks UNESCO World Heritage Site. Together, with Banff, Jasper, Kootenay, and Yoho National Park, as well as Mount Assiniboine and Hamber provincial parks, Mount Robson is renowned for its incredible natural beauty and its geological and ecological significance. In addition to Mount Robson, the park is an astounding representation of the North Continental Ranges and contains extraordinary massifs like The Dome, Resplendent Mountain, The Helmet, Mount Fraser, and Whitehorn Mountain. Surrounded by three prominent mountain ranges, the Caribou, Monashee, and Rockies, Mount Robson is an understandably popular destination for avid backpackers and hikers. The park's first recreational trail was built in 1913 along the Robson River to Berg Lake remains one of the park's most prized footpaths. Though the park is best-known for its imposing mountainous terrain, it also preserves four unique biogeoclimatic zones - Interior Cedar Hemlock, Sub-boreal Spruce, Engelmann Spruce-Subalpine Fir, and Alpine Tundra zone. In addition to these ecosystems, the park protects the headwaters and first 62 miles of British Columbia's most important river - the Fraser River. and flows for more than 850 miles to the Pacific Ocean.42 species of bird call Mount Robson Provincial Park home. In late May, it's not uncommon to witness Mule Deer, Whitetail Deer, Whiteta bird enthusiasts from around the world looking to appreciate the park's incredible bird population. Major Trails and Hiking AreasBerg Lake trail travels for 23 kilometers through three different biogeoclimatic zones. In route to this icon of the Rockies, hikers will enter the Valley of a Thousand Falls, passing stunning glaciers, including Berg and Robson glaciers, waterfalls, and iridescent turquoise lakes. Most hikers will opt to use one of the campsites at Berg Lake as a basecamp and continue exploring the area. Several popular day hikes can also be accessed via the Berg Lake Trailhead or from campgrounds along the way. 4.5 km from the trailhead, hikers can reach Kinney Lake, an expansion of the Robson River. From the Berg Lake Campground, hikers can also continue on 22 km to Snowbird Pass. This epic footpath is located 7 miles up a glacially carved valley that flows into Berg Lake. The trail, which follows the Robson River before climbing up the pass, offers impressive views of the expansive Reef Icefield and surrounding summits. At the end of the Berg Lake Trail, hikers can also opt to follow a 2-hour footpath to Toboggan Falls, a 284-foot cascading waterfall found north of Berg Lake. Major Cities and Resorts Mountain River Lodge The Mount Roberts Mountain River Roberts Rob Mount Robson and Jasper National Park. The main lodge rooms offer visitors private bathrooms and complimentary breakfast, but guests can also opt to stay in a private self-catered cabin. The lodge also sits just 5 minutes from the famous Berg Lake Trail, making it an excellent option for avid hikers and outdoor enthusiasts. Mount Robson Lodge and CampgroundNestled on the shores of the Fraser River, the Mount Robson Lodge was founded in 1981. The lodge, which sits just 90 km from Jasper, is comfortable, affordable, and ideally located for exploring Mount Robson Provincial Park. The lodge offers 18 cabins, some of which offer incredible views of Mt. Robson, as well as a 25 seasonal on the Fraser River JasperKnown as the "Gentle Giant of the Rockies," Jasper is a peaceful mountain town teeming with adventure. The world's largest dark sky preserve, Jasper is the perfect place for stargazing and, if you're lucky, experiencing the aurora borealis. Jasper Serves as the ideal place to explore the alpine terrain in Jasper National Park. In addition to year-round outdoor recreation opportunities, Jasper offers a variety of accommodations including reputable resorts like Pyramid Lake Resort, Mount Robson Inn, and Fairmont Jasper Park Lodge. All wildlife indigenous to the Rocky Mountains can be found here. Wildlife populations are allowed to ebb and flow with minimal intervention from humans. There are excellent wildlife viewing opportunities throughout the park. From mountain goats on the many cliffs and rockslides to moose, elk, and black bears call the lower elevations home. Grizzly bears, caribou, mountain goats, and mountain sheep inhabit the higher elevations. To date, 42 species of mammals, four amphibians, one reptile, and 182 species of birds have been recorded in the park. These species are typical of the moist, western slope of the Rocky Mountains. From the valley-bottom-loving moose to the mountain goats and golden eagles of the Alpine Tundra Zone, all four biogeoclimactic zones within the park provide habitat for varied species that favor the unique characteristics found in each zone. This is not to say that species like grizzly bear or mule deer find suitable habitats in only one zone, but generally certain zones or elevations attract specific species. Excellent opportunities for wildlife viewing are available within the park. On one drive through the highway corridor in late May, park staff observed mule deer, whitetail deer, moose, elk, wolf, coyote, black bear, grizzly bear, and a large variety of waterfowl. In the spring, cow elk become extremely protective of their new calves. Moose and deer also actively defend their young, but the elk seem most prone to short tempers when confronted with anything they perceive as a threat to their young. In the fall, the males of these species that can become aggressive. The mating or rutting season in September and October can make even the most seemingly docile elk, moose, or deer aggressive. Although they are beautiful to look at, keep clear of all wildlife and give them the space they need to ensure their safety and yours. Binoculars are a great aid to the traveler in Mountain goats and grizzly bears can often be spotted. A long tradition in Mount Robson Park, the Bird Blitz takes place in June each year. Bird enthusiasts from far and wide come to enjoy the beautiful spring scenery as well as the opportunity to observe and count the parks incredible bird population. A number of the valleys in the park have no routes or trails and extremely low levels of human use. grizzly bears, caribou, wolverines, and other wild species seem quite happy to keep it that way. komootRoutesRoute plannerFeaturesProduct updatesGet the komoot appJoin 45 million outdoor enthusiasts: navigate, discover, adventure.4.8/5Based on more than 300k user ratingsDownload komoot nowVisit the App Store, Google Play or scan the QR code with your phone to download instantly. A very beautiful, idyllic mountain lake, easily accessible from the Mount Robson Visitor Center. On the hiking trail there, a large bear crossed the path right in front of us, ] so watch out... translated by Tip by Werner Canadian Rockies and, after Mount Waddington, the second highest mountain located entirely in British Columbia. The mountain is located in Mount Robson Park and is the largest waterfall on the Fraser River. The falls is a short walk from the Yellowhead Highway. It plunges about ... Tip by Hubert TrappSee hikes hereViewThe Mountain Lake Trail is a well-known trail in Mount Robson Provincial Park in the Canadian Rockies. On a distance of 23 kilometers, it is necessary to cover 800 meters ... translated by Tip by Karsten S.See hikes hereView to discover even more attractions in Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated: June 23, 2025Popular around Mount Robson Provincial Park.Last updated let us know if you're ok with that. You can change your preferences anytime. For more information, see our data privacy statement. Nestled between the rugged peaks of the Canadian Rockies and the lush forests of British Columbia, the Yellowhead Corridor is a captivating route that offers travelers an unforgettable experience. This scenic highway, known for its breathtaking landscapes and diverse wildlife, winds through charming towns and pristine wilderness. Among the highlights of this journey are Mount Robson, Jasper, Dunster, Tete Jaune, and Valemount, each with its unique character and charm. Starting our journey at Mount Robson, we are immediately captivated by its majestic presence. Standing at 3,954 meters (12,972 feet), Mount Robson is a paradise for outdoor enthusiasts. Its towering cliffs and stunning glaciers attract hikers, climbers, and photographers alike. The surrounding Mount Robson Provincial Park features numerous trails, such as the popular Berg Lake Trail, offering breathtaking views of the mountain, waterfalls, and turquoise lakes. The area's biodiversity is remarkable, and visitors may spot black bears, moose, and various bird species as they explore the trails. The crown jewel, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies Jasper National Park awaits us. Designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site Starting our journey at Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, we are immediately captivated by its majestic presence. Standing at 3,954 meters (12,972 feet), Mount Robson is a paradise for outdoor enthusiasts. Its towering cliffs and stunning glaciers attract hikers, climbers, and photographers alike. The surrounding Mount Robson is a paradise for outdoor enthusiasts. Its towering cliffs and stunning glaciers attract hikers, climbers, and photographers alike. the popular Berg Lake Trail, offering breathtaking views of the mountain, waterfalls, and turquoise lakes. The area's biodiversity is remarkable, and various bird species as they explore the trails. As we continue our journey along the Yellowhead Highway, Jasper National Park awaits us. Designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site, Jasper is known for its dramatic landscapes, abundant wildlife, and starry skies. The quaint town of Jasper SkyTram for panoramic views or embark on a wildlife tour to see elk, bighorn sheep, and even wolves in their natural habitat. For those seeking adventure, the park offers activities such as canoeing, cycling, and skiing in the winter months. Don't forget to take a stroll along the Yellowhead Corridor is Valemount, a vibrant town located at the base of the majestic Canadian Rockies. Known for its stunning landscapes, Valemount is a hub for outdoor adventure, offering everything from skiing and mountain biking in the summer. The nearby Mount Robson Provincial Park and Wells Gray Provincial Park provide countless opportunities for exploration. Valemount is also home to the Valemount Museum, which showcases the region's history and culture, allowing visitors to connect with the local heritage. Continuing our journey, we arrive at Tête Jaune Cache, a picturesque area that serves as a junction between the Yellowhead Highway and Highway 5, leading into the Fraser Valley. This small community is rich in history, with roots tracing back to early fur traders and explorers. Here, visitors can enjoy a variety of recreational activities, from hiking and mountain biking to fishing in the nearby rivers. The area is also known for its stunning views of the surrounding mountains and forests, making it a perfect spot for photography enthusiasts. Leaving Jasper behind, we head to Dunster, a charming small community that embodies the essence of rural British Columbia. Known for its friendly atmosphere and rich history, Dunster offers visitors a glimpse into a quieter way of life. The Dunster Museum tells the story of the region's logging and railway heritage, while the surrounding countryside provides ample opportunities for outdoor activities. Hiking trails and fishing spots abound, making it an ideal stop for those seeking a peaceful retreat surrounded by nature. The nearby historic Dunster Railway Station adds a touch of nostalgia to this idyllic stop. This blog may contain affiliate links. Read our disclosure policy for more info. Mount Robson Provincial Park is one of the oldest parks in British Columbia and is the home of the highest mountain in the Canadian Rockies! It's no wonder this is one of the most beautiful places to visit in BC with jaw-dropping scenery and amazing wildlife. While it's definitely not as famous as, say, Banff and Jasper National Parks, it's still spectacular - in fact, we think of it as a bit of a hidden gem, despite the fact it's home to a huge mountain. If you're a nature lover, then you definitely won't want to miss out on a visit to Mount Robson Provincial Park. It's a great way to see a lesser-known part of the Canadian Rockies, and there are a ton of activities to enjoy in the park, from camping and canoeing to scenic flights and hikes. We love visiting this park and think it's kind of a shame that more people don't know about it - although at the same time, it's nice to visit somewhere that's a bit off the beaten path! We've compiled a guide containing everything you need to know about visiting Mount Robson Provincial Park so that you're ready to explore this beautiful part of British Columbia. Berg Lake Trail Scenic flight over Mount Robson Provincial Park is the second oldest provincial Park is Rockies. The park's first trail was also built in 1913, stretching from Robson River to Berg Lake. Mount Robson is not only the tallest peak in British Columbia, behind Mount Waddington which is part of the Coast mountain range. There's some debate about who it was named after: either John Robson, a politician and journalist, or Colin Robertson, an early Canadian fur trader. The park covers an area of 2,249 square kilometers (868 square miles). It encompasses diverse natural landscapes, including mountains, glaciers, lakes, waterfalls, and caves, which makes it an ideal place for outdoor adventure activities. There's so much stunning natural beauty here, which is precisely why we love it so much! The Berg Glacier! The park is in British Columbia, just west of the Alberta border, and is part of the Canadian Rocky Mountain Parks UNESCO World Heritage Site. It borders Jasper National Park to the east, and the closest village is Tête Jaune Cache, although the park is also ust an hour's drive from Jasper or 20 minutes from Valemount. We were actually surprised by how easy it is to access, especially considering that it feels like you're in an isolated paradise when you're here! Related read: Need a road trip guide? Check out this route to drive from Vancouver to Jasper where the most scenic part of the drive around Mount Robson! Emperor falls in Mount Robson Provincial Park, Canada Summer is the ideal time to visit Mount Robson Provincial Park, as this is when the area enjoys the highest temperatures. It never gets much warmer than the late teens in Celsius (low 60s in Fahrenheit), which is nice for hiking and exploring. We visited during the summer and found that the weather was perfect. In the late spring and early summer, wildflowers bloom, making for a beautiful and colorful landscape. In early autumn, the larches turn golden-yellow, which is also a stunning sight. The area receives a lot of snow during the winter, and temperatures drop to well below freezing, so this isn't a great time to visit unless you want to go snowshoeing or cross-country skiing. Conditions can also be dangerous in the park during the winter and most of the hiking trails. Taking a cold dip in Berg Lake! Yes, it's free to visit if you're just coming for the day. However, if you want to stay overnight in the park you'll need to book and pay for a campsite, but we'll get into more detail about that later on in the blog. But since there are a handful of towns nearby, you don't have to camp in the park unless you want to and you can visit free of charge. Related read: For more budget-friendly ideas, check out the top free things to do in Vancouver! A hiker's dream! Jasper is an awesome little town in the heart of the Canadian Rockies. It's popular with tourists because it's a great base for exploring the national park's many alpine lakes, incredible hiking trails, hot springs, and ski fields. For a long time, we actually kind of overlooked how many cool things therein the national park's many alpine lakes, incredible hiking trails, hot springs, and ski fields. were to do in the town itself, but when we spent some time there we fell in love with its laid-back vibe and myriad of cute cafes and great restaurants. Jasper is about 90 kilometers (56 miles) away from Mount Robson Provincial Park, and the hour-long drive through the mountains to get there is absolutely beautiful. Related read: Jasper is so beautiful it's also a top honeymoon destination! Valemount is a small village that's around 33 kilometers (20.5 miles) away from Mount Robson Provincial Park. It receives its fair share of visitors, but we actually think that it's one of British Columbia's most underrated mountain towns. You definitely won't find the same crowds here that you'll encounter in places like Banff, and it's a great base for activities like hiking, white water rafting, and fishing. So basically, if you want a quiet and peaceful getaway, Valemount should be your destination. Tête Jaune Cache is a small community located on the banks of the Fraser River. It's the closest town to Mount Robson Provincial Park as it's only 14 kilometers. (8.6 miles away), so it should only take you around 10 minutes to drive there. It's a really quiet place, but there are some fun adventures to be had here, like exploring waterfalls, taking ATV tours, horseback riding, and mountain biking. Emperor Falls on the Berg Lake Trail is currently closed due to flooding that damaged the trail in 2021. A portion of the trail to the Kinney Lake Campground will reopen in 2023. Check for updates here before you go! I have hiked A LOT in Canada and the Berg Lake Trail ranks at the very top of my list. It's just that beautiful! If you're an avid hiker, trust me, you'll want to do this one. Now saying that, I'll warn you it's not an easy hike. The trail is a 41.5 km (25.7 mile) out-and-back trail that takes an average of 3-4 days to hike. It also takes some planning as you'll need to have spots to camp along the trail include Emperor Falls, Berg Lake, the Valley of a Thousand Waterfalls, and the Berg Glacier. If you're really lucky, you might just see giant chunks of ice break off the huge glaciers and fall into the waters of Berg Lake - it's spectacular to see if you time it right! The trail is very steep and long, but honestly booking it can be more challenging than hiking it! You'll want to plan months in advance for the hike so you can secure reservations. A great summary we found helpful is on the BC Parks website - check out the video for tips. Flying high above Mt Robson and Berg Lake! Now if a days-long hike is not your thing, another way to take in the epic views of Mount Robson Provincial Park is from the sky! I booked a helicopter flight with Robson Heli Magic after hiking the Berg Lake Trail because I knew the scenery would be breathtaking - even then, I still wasn't prepared for just how incredible it was! Their Majestic Mt. Robson Tour is a 36-minute flight that takes you over glacier peaks, waterfalls, and lakes that are that unreal shade of turquoise blue. Everywhere you look it's like a travel magazine come to life! The flight costs a total of $995 CAD per helicopter. It's the same price for 1-4 passengers, so bring a friend or two and split the cost of this once-in-a-lifetime experiences on this list for the ultimate adventure! Instead of hiking the entire Berg Lake Trail, you can also take a one-way helicopter flight with Robson Heli Magic to the end of the trail and then walk back. You'll be dropped off at the Robson Pass Campground and then hike downhill for 22.5 kms (14.3 miles) back to the start of the trail head. This is a great way to cut that long hike in half, but still get the rewards of amazing views. You'll have Mount Robson towering over you the whole time! The route takes you along the Robson River past several glaciers and Emperor Falls, which is a huge and powerful waterfall that's honestly a pretty majestic sight. It sprays so much mist that you can even "take a shower" in it! You'll also go past the Valley of a Thousand Waterfalls and Kinney Lake I'm not going to lie - this hike is very tiring and it's a super long day. Daniel did it and he was exhausted by the end, but if you love hiking and have a good level of fitness, then it's a super beautiful way to explore the park. Note: The Berg Lake Trail is currently closed, so this experience is not available in 2023. We hope to see it offered again in 2024 The lake is easy to access and very popular with day and overnight trips! Kinney Lake Trail, you can walk or bike along the Berg Lake Trail, you can walk or bike along the Kinney Lake Trail, you can walk or bike along the Berg Lake Trail takes you along the trail takes you along the Kinney Lake is a beautiful azure lake along the trail takes you along the Kinney Lake Trail, you can walk or bike along the Kinney Lake Trail takes you along the Robson River and through an old-growth forest, so it's an awesome way to explore the park if you don't have the time, fitness level, or inclination to do the entire Berg Lake Trail. You can even snowshoe it during the winter months! And of course, once you get to the lake itself you can rest for a while as you admire the views, or even dip your feet in the icy water! Note: The Kinney Lake Trail closed in 2021 after extensive flooding, but this section of trail and the campground are set to open in late June 2023. The beautiful Overlander Falls. If you're up for chasing some waterfalls in Mount Robson Provincial Park, you don't have to plan a days-long hike to see a nice one! One of my favorite walks here is the Overlander Falls Short Trail. It's only 10 minutes from the start of the trail near the Mt Robson Visitor Centre until you're at a nice flat viewing area to take in the falls! While it's not the most spectacular waterfall, it's a short walk and the forest around here is stunning. There's also the option to extend this hike a bit by taking the Overlander Falls Long Trail which starts from Hargreaves Road around the Robson Meadows Campground. This route follows the Fraser River and has mountains surrounding you. There are some nice viewpoints along this longer trail to see the canyon and river along with an old railway contractor site. The trail is 4.5 kms (2.7 miles) to go to the falls and back and should take about 1.5 hours. Related read: For more easy trails like this one, these are the top easy day hikes in Vancouver! The Mt Robson Visitor Centre is a super useful place to help you get the most out of your visit. You can find out about all of the different trails and activities in the park, as well as get maps and information about the park's history and wildlife. The center closes during the winter, but during summer it's open from 8 am - 4 pm daily. How the salmon make it up this waterfall is beyond me! Rearguard Falls Provincial Park is a small park just outside Mount Robson Provincial Park - about a 10-minute drive away. The big draw here is Rearguard Falls itself where you can see the Chinook salmon finish their massive! To catch this feat in person, you'll need to visit between mid-August and mid-September. Even if you don't happen to visit during this time, it's still a neat place to visit. I really enjoyed having a peek at the info boards in the area to learn more about this massive migration every year. The park's crystal-clear rivers and lakes make great places to go fishing. Moose and Yellowhead lakes are especially popular fishing spots, and some of the species you can expect to catch include bull trout, rainbow trout, and Rocky Mountain whitefish. There are also dolly varden in these lakes, but they are catch-and-release only - you can check the fishing regulations at the visitor center before you head out. Boat launch ramps are available at both of these lakes, and the pools and streams in the park also present great opportunities for catching Kokanee Salmon. You'll need to buy a BC fishing license before you cast your rod in Mount Robson Provincial Park, which you can get online or purchase at the visitor center in the park. The license costs $36 CAD per year for BC residents, or $10 CAD per day. If you're not from BC, this license cost is $55 CAD yearly or $20 CAD for a one-day pass. Related read: For more epic fishing, anglers from around the world head to Parksville, BC! Bear safety is important in Mount Robson Provincial Park is home to some amazing wildlife. including deer, elk, grizzly bears, moose, and black bears. You can also spot birds such as bald eagles and osprey, as well as smaller animals like squirrels, porcupines, marmots, and beavers. We found it super exciting to spot a grizzly bear in the wild (from a safe distance, of course!). Related read: If spotting animals is a must, make sure you take in all the wildlife around Banff National Park! A tent at Whitehorn Campgrounds in Mount Robson Provincial Park The campgrounds in Mount Robson Provincial Park are dotted along the Berg Lake Trail. We've listed the campgrounds in Mount to stay overnight you have plenty of options! The Berg Lake Trail is a popular route so you'll need to book in advance to get a spot, which you can do via the BC Parks website. Kinney Lake, and it's a great place to camp if you don't want to tackle the entire Berg Lake Trail, about 4 km (2.5 miles) from the entrance and 6.8 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground is a backcountry campground that's 10.4 kilometers (6.5 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground is a backcountry campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the entrance and 6.8 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilometers (4.2 miles) from the trailhead. Whitehorn Campground that's 10.4 kilomet with outhouse toilets, bear lockers, and a cooking area. It's a lovely spot for views of Mount Robson and the surrounding area. Despite its name, you don't have a view of Emperor Falls from this campsite, but it's right along the Robson River. The campground is 16 kilometers (10 miles) along the Berg Lake Trail, another 5.6 kilometers (3.5 miles) further on than the previous campground. There's no cooking shelter here, but there are bear lockers and outhouses. 21 kilometers (4.3 miles) past the Emperor Falls Campground. There are 26 sites here and a log cabin to shelter and cook in. It's close to the Berg Glacier and offers amazing views of the surrounding mountains. A kilometer later, you'll come to the Rearguard Campground, which is 22 kilometers (13.6 miles) along the trail and is set amongst some trees, which is great for shade and shelter. There's no shelter here, but if the weather is bad you can head back to the Berg Lake Campground to cozy up inside the log cabin. The Robson Pass Campground is at the very end of the Berg Lake Trail, and after a mammoth day of hiking, you can reward yourself by setting up camp here. It's a beautiful spot, and you'll wake up to be greeted with stunning views of Mount Robson, which is an amazing reward for all your hard work. Since it's right at the end of the trail, this is one of the most popular campsites and it can get busy, so be sure to book well in advance. The Berg Glacier in Mount Robson Provincial Park You can also stay just outside Mount Robson Provincial Park Since there are a bunch of accommodation options just minutes away. This is a good idea if you're not going to hike the Berg Lake Trail because all of the campsites listed above are along the trail. Plus, many of those campsites will remain closed until the trail re-opens, but you can stay at the options below right now. Of course, you can also just stay in Jasper, Valemont, or Tête Jaune Cache and drive to the park for a day trip! The Robson Meadows Campground is 3.5 kilometers (2.2 miles) outside of the park, so it's a great alternative to staying inside the park, so it's a great alternative to staying inside the park, so it's a great alternative to staying inside the park - especially if you're not planning on tackling the Berg Lake Trail. There's lots of shade and the campsites are large, and there's a small store and restaurant which is handy. Robson River Campground is 2.6 kilometers (1.6 miles) from Mount Robson Provincial Park, and it's a great place to pitch a tent for the night so that you can explore the park in depth. There are showers and flushing toilets, as well as pit ones. The only downside is that you do hear quite a lot of noise from the highway, which we found interrupted our sleep a little. This lodge offers B&B rooms or private cabins just a kilometer outside of the park, so it's a great alternative to camping. All rooms have private bathrooms and there's a living room with a fireplace where you can warm up after a day of exploring the park. Breakfast is also included, which is always a big bonus for us! Situated 4 kilometers (2.5 miles) from the park, Mount Robson Lodge is another great option if cozy cabins are your thing. The cabins sleep up to 4 people and include a private living room, kitchenette, and bathroom. The lodge is only open from May – October, and you have to book 3 nights at a time. You can check availability and book online here. What a place! There's a gas station and coffee shop inside the park, as well as the visitor center where you can go to find information and plan your visit. The Visitor Center, gas station, and park campgrounds all have toilets and there are picnic areas throughout, too. The closest medical clinic is in Valemount, which is a 25-minute drive away. If you plan to hike far, make sure your dog is up to the challenge! Dogs are welcome in the park, but they must be kept on a leash at all times. You can take your dog with you on the hiking trails, but only during the daytime, so if you're camping in the park then your furry friend will have to stay at home. This means that you can't really bring your dog if you're planning to hike the full Berg Lake Trail. The lake really is that blue! No, you can't get any cell phone reception in the park. It's best to download any maps or info you need it, but other than that a trip to Mount Robson Provincial Park really is a chance to go off the grid. Of course, Mount Robson is one of the most beautiful parks in Canada! Yes, the park is super beautiful and if you're a fan of hiking and/or fishing, then you'll be in your element here. The alpine scenery is spectacular and you get the chance to really explore nature, as well as appreciate all of the wildlife that calls the park home. Plus, it's a great way to get away from town and just relax for a few days - so if that's what you're after, then we'd definitely recommend making the trip! Renting a Car in British Columbia via plane, then I can't recommend getting a rental car enough. British Columbia is a large province, and traveling between thee best places to visit in BC requires transport. Although you can use public transport on some occasions, this means your trip will not only require more time but more planning. Car rental in Canada isn't relatively cheap, but it's not that expensive either, especially if you get a budget car. The cheapest car with a pick-up and drop-off in different locations is around $100 CAD per day. The price does vary though, depending on the time of year. For car rentals, I use the website Discover Cars all over the world, including in Chile, New Zealand, and Australia. Read my honest review of Discover Cars here for more details! Another popular option is to rent a campervan or motorhome (only for the brave in winter). Using Motorhome Republic, you can search hundreds of deals across multiple companies to pick a great vehicle and the cheapest price. cheap in the most beautiful places imaginable! Read my tips on using Motorhome Republic here before you book! And if you're planning to visit the Canadian Rockies during your trip, we highly recommend Smile Campervans. Based in Calgary, this local company provides compact campervans fully equipped with everything you need for a comfortable and affordable road trip adventure! In fact, Smile Campervans has actually given us a special discount code for our readers! Use the code DESTINATIONLESSTRAVEL at checkout to get 5% off your campervan rental! Click here to browse availability, prices, and book with our discount code! Thanks for reading! Hopefully, this guide to Mount Robson Provincial Park has helped you plan your visit here! It's definitely a hiker's paradise. I'm STILL thinking about those views. I love that it's not a busy spot, but you still feel like you're in the midst of all the best the Rocky Mountains have to offer. If you're heading to this part of the world soon, make sure to browse around our other Canada blogs. From road trip ideas to hidden gems and tons of activities, we'll help you make the most of your trip. 22 FUN Things to do in Jasper in Summer 13 BEST Stops on the Drive from Kamloops to Edmonton How to Spend One Day in Vancouver, BC: An Ideal 1-Day Itinerary The extensive size and diverse nature of Mount Robson Park means the most of your trip. that visitors to the area can choose from a variety of activities ranging from those suitable for families with small children, to those appropriate for expert mountain climbers. Camping: There are 3 different vehicle accessible campsites at Mount Robson Park, Robson Meadows, Robson River, and Lucerne. Reservations are available at Robson Meadows, the largest of the three campsites. Lucerne is the most remote and the most remote and the most restic, while the other two are within walking distance of the main Visitor Center. Backcountry campsites are available along the Berg Lake Trail and on several trails originating in the main Highway 16 corridor. The Lucerne campsite also has two walk/cycle-in sites. Hikers are reminded that during high season the Berg Lake Trail is busy and that unless reservations are made in advance, there may be difficulties obtaining a campsite or even getting on the Berg Lake Trail. Day use/picnicking: Picnic spots are found a various sites along the main highway corridor, as well as five km (three mi) down the Berg Lake Trail, at the south end of Kinney Lake. Hiking, mountaineering, and climbing: Mount Robson Park has numerous trails for hikers of all levels to enjoy. The Berg Lake Trail, one of the longest, is actually a series of trails that run for approximately 23 km (14 mi) to and around Berg Lake. These trails offer something for a range of hikers, from beginner to experienced. Shorter, but still interesting and beautiful hikes and walks leave from all three campsites, as there are multiple trailheads along the corridor. Some of these trails offer signed interpretive walks. The Berg Lake Trail is also the access route for climbing Mount Robson itself, which is considered an extremely challenging mountain to climber should attempt this difficult 3,954 m (12,900 ft) peak. Water Sports: The water in Mount Robson's lakes is mostly fed by meltance of the second strength and extremely challenging mountain to climber should attempt this difficult 3,954 m (12,900 ft) peak. Water Sports: The water in Mount Robson's lakes is mostly fed by meltance of the second strength and extremely challenging mountain to climber should attempt this difficult 3,954 m (12,900 ft) peak. water flowing from the surrounding glaciers. Hence, they are icy cold, and thus swimming is not a key feature of the park. A swimming beach is however located along the Highway 16 corridor, each have a boat ramp and are suitable for canoeing and boating Boaters are warned that these lakes are commonly subject to strong winds. For those who enjoy fishing, Portal and Whitney Lakes offer small Rainbow Trout, Kokanee and Whitefish. There is also seasonal fishing permitted in the Fraser River. All anglers require a valid fishing licence. "The water in Mount Robson's lakes is mostly fed by melt water flowing from the surrounding glaciers." Mount Robson Provincial Park in British Columbia features the highest mountain in the Canadian Rockies, many hiking trails, and plenty of activities to do. Our travel guide includes the best things to do in Mount Robson Provincial Park, top hikes, attractions, and tips on when to go, directions, or accommodation. Mount Robson is a beautiful provincial park in British Columbia that features breathtaking scenery, great hiking trails, and abundant wildlife. Add migrating salmons, turquoise lakes, massive glaciers, or backcountry campgrounds, and you will get one of the finest experiences of the Canadian Rockies. Once you start planning your trip to the Canadian Rockies, the first considerations and ideas usually drift towards the most famous national Park) in this mountainous region in Western Canada. Unfortunately, travelers only scarcely hear of Mount Robson Provincial Park, which is a bit of shame, in our opinion. Established in 1913, Mount Robson Provincial Park is surrounded by scenery that is on par with Alberta Province and easily accessible by car. Moreover, the area is only about an hour's ride from the town of Jasper, meaning that you can visit Mount Robson on a day trip while road tripping Jasper National Park. As with other top attractions in the Canadian Rockies, even simple driving along the Yellowhead Highway 16 is a part of the magical experience. If you are looking for information on what to do in Mount Robson Provincial Park, you've come to the right place. Here is everything you need to know about Mount Robson Provincial Park, is also a part of the Canadian Rockies and the most prominent peak in North America's Rocky Mountain range. Moreover, it's part of the Rainbow Range. The origin of the English name still remains a bit of mystery, as there are a few explanations after whom the mountain was named. However, the First Nations used this area for centuries before it became an important travel route for fur traders and gold seekers in the 19th century, and their original naming is much clearer. The name Mountain of the Spiral Road (Yuh-hai-has-kun) was given by the local Shuswap people and reflected the mountain's geology that features a layered appearance, a path to the sky. A fun fact. While Mount Robson is the highest mountain in the Rockies, with 5959 meters, Mount Logan in Yukon is the highest mountain in Canada. From guided walks, groomed trails, canoeing, horseback riding to Heli tours, there's only one condition. To include Mount Robson in your Canadian Rockies itinerary, you must be a person who loves nature in its raw form, an avid hiker, photographer, or all of that in one. And even if you're rather a city type of traveler, we believe this particular area will change your attitude a bit, and from now on, you will enjoy walking in the mountains a bit more. Although the scenery of the Canadian Rockies is breathtaking even through the window of your car, the best way to fully explore it is on foot. Hiking in the Canadian Rockies is one of the most rewarding experiences ever, but it's good to know what to expect and come prepared. Compared to trails in Banff National Park or hikes in Jasper National Park, Mount Robson Provincial Park offers only limited hiking opportunities. The best hiking trails in Mount Robson Provincial Park are in the Berg Lake area, but it's a bit harder to get all the way to the lake itself, especially if you are short on time. Needless to say, that the walk to Kinney Lake is nice and easy and well worth the effort for visitors who can spend only a short time in the park. Furthermore, a few less popular trails can be found in the east end of Mount Robson Provincial Park, such as Yellowhead Mountain Trail, Moose River Route is a serious trek lacking a proper trail at times and will take you into a pure Canadian wilderness. Again, note that only well-experienced hikers should only attempt this trek.KINNEY LAKE TRAILA beautiful trail leading through the forest for the first 4 kilometers is running along the continuous rapids of Robson River and allows you to get a glimpse of Mount Robson's stunning beauty.Kinney Lake (and Berg Lake) trailhead starts at the end of Kinney Lake Road, about two kilometers, with an elevation gain of 130 meters, making it an easy to moderate walk for families with kids and novice hikers. It's worth it to continue past the first Kinney Lake viewpoint all the way to Kinney Lake Campground, where you can have your snack or lunch and then retrace your steps back. Sometimes, Kinney Lake Trail, as they share the same path. This hike is roughly 21 kilometers from the visitors center to the lake, and the elevation gain is approximately 800 meters. Berg Lake Trail can be described as moderately challenging if you stay in the Berg Lake Campground (or any other site) overnight or difficult if you want to complete it in one day (due to its length). The trail allows you to see Mount Robson from the other site) overnight or difficult if you want to complete it in one day (due to its length). The trail allows you to see Mount Robson from the other site) overnight or difficult if you want to complete it in one day (due to its length). The trail allows you to see Mount Robson from the other site) overnight or difficult if you want to complete it in one day (due to its length). The trail allows you to see Mount Robson from the other site) overnight or difficult if you want to complete it in one day (due to its length). The trail allows you to see Mount Robson from the other site) overnight or difficult if you want to complete it in one day (due to its length). Kinney Lake, expect to walk by some creeks, waterfalls, and river crossings with bridges. In fact, Berg Lake is connected with Kinney Lake by the Valley of a Thousand Falls, so you will see plenty of waterfalls along the trail. Don't forget to make a short detour to Emperor Falls (bring a rain poncho); it's worth it. There is a steeper section between Whitehorn and Emperor Falls campgrounds; otherwise, the trail is quite gentle. There are four campgrounds at the lake, and the Berg Lake viewpoint, Hargreaves Lake, Robson Pass, or Mumm Basin Trail. As the campgrounds along the trail are often booked out, you might want to consider hiking to Berg Lake and back in one day. It's doable but be prepared for a long and tiring day. Also, you won't have time to do some hikes around the lake. At kilometers out of a total of 42 kilometers very quickly. Make sure to bring a headlamp! An easy trail through a forest (30-45 minutes round trip) will take you to Overlander Falls on Fraser River. The 30-wide and 10-meter tall waterfall is mightily roaring from a distance, and it's among the best places to visit in Mount Robson Park when short on time. The shorter trail leads downhill until you reach the falls, then you have to hike up (nothing strenuous, though). The falls were named after a fairly large group of overland travelers from Ontario who, in the spring of 1862, passed along this point in a search for newly discovered goldfields in British Columbia. From the visitor center, continue driving straight for 1.5 kilometers until you turn into the parking lot on your right. There is an alternative 6-kilometer route to Overlander Falls that starts on the Hargreaves Road (close to the bridge near Robson Meadows Campground) and leads along the Fraser River. On the way, you will pass the Hogan's Cabin, a former railway construction camp that was established during the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway from 1911 to 1914. In general, the waterfall is not as impressive as Athabasca Falls in Jasper or Helmcken Falls in Jasper or Helmcken Falls in Wells Gray Provincial Park, though it's still worth a visit. On the way from Jasper in Alberta province, alias the Wild Rose Country, you will soon enough cross the border to British Columbia, boldly claiming to be the Best Place on Earth.Right behind the sign is pull-out parking and Yellowhead Pass National Historic Site. This area also marks the eastern border of Mount Robson Park.So make sure to take a photo with the statue of a white mountain goat guarding the entrance to the park.In the first half of the 19th century, the pass was used to transport leather, mainly moose hides from Saskatchewan District, to its posts in New Caledonia, a fur-trading district of the Hudson's Bay Company.Later on, the Yellowhead Pass was used as a part of the Grand Trunk Pacific and Canadian Northern Routes. Nowadays, it became a major highway crossing the Canadian Rockies.Don't the Portal Lake Trail, a short and easy 20-minute (return) walk, while in the area. Both Moose Lake and Stretch your legs. We liked Moose Lake a bit more, as the Yellowhead Lake views are limited from the road. Train tracks are parallel to the a day-use area (and a boat launch) where you can stop to take a day-use area (and a boat launch) where you can stop to take a bit more, as the Yellowhead Lake Noose Lake a bit more, as t highway at Moose Lake, and if you are lucky, you can see one of those extremely long double-stack container trains. The longest Canadian trains can stretch more than four kilometers and weigh up to 18 thousand tons. If we recall correctly, the train we saw from the Yellowhead Parkway was pulling almost two hundred containers at the lower layer and just a few less at the upper layer. The freight trains in the Czech Republic are a laughing stock compared to these monsters, and we always were in awe when seeing these Canadian trains slowly passing by. By the way, if you are fascinated by the trains, note that there is a famous viewpoint in Yoho National Park called Spiral Tunnels, where you can see the train climbing a mountain in a series of tunnels. Even if you don't have time to hike to either Kinney Lake or Berg Lake, it's worth stopping by the visitor center, as there is a nice viewpoint offering excellent views of Mount Robson and some picnic tables to enjoy your lunch and take some time off the driving. The views of Mount Robson and some picnic tables to enjoy your lunch and take some time off the driving. from the highway are amazing, but it's better to pull over to take some photos for safety reasons. And even if you just want to stretch your legs for a few minutes or grab a coffee, don't forget to stop by. The visitor center is very informative, and so is the staff working there. A small museum is located within the visitor center and gives you insight into the entire area. You will learn more about geology, the history of the park and the whole area, mapmakers, mountaineers, local fauna, and flora. Free Wi-Fi is available, though due to the area's remoteness, you can't expect miracles (the connection is often slow). Also, there is no cell coverage in the park. Moreover, the visitor center offers Berg Lake Trail registration. If you plan on camping in one of the seven campgrounds, you need to register here before setting off. Once you register, you will get full info on the trail, hikes, camping, rules, etc.Keep in mind that reservations must be made online in advance of arrival. This rule is due to high demand, and it's rigorous. To get to the visitor center parking lot, leave the Yellowhead Highway, turn onto Kinney Lake Road, and almost immediately turn right once more Just off the Yellowhead Highway is also located a local restaurant/store/gas station in case you need something. While you get impressive views from the trail, you might want to consider taking a Heli flight to see all that beauty from above. Only a bird-eye perspective allows you to understand the size of the area fully. So, if you want to fly in and hike out, you can consider taking a Heli flight to Robson Pass. One thing is sure, Heli Tours are not cheap. The flight to Berg Lake costs $265 without tax per person (and includes a shuttle service to the Berg Lake Trail). Is Mount Robson helicopter flight worth it? Well, it highly depends on your travel budget. We reserved a similar experience exceeded our expectations (and left a big void in our wallet and our frugal travel minds). We must only imagine that the Mount Robson experience will be very similar or even better. The flight departs from Mount Robson Pit, about 1.5 kilometers east of the visitor center near the Overlander Falls trailhead. Also, the tour company is allowed to fly Monday and Friday mornings only, so you need to plan your trip carefully. Home to some pristine waters, Mount Robson Provincial Park, presents good opportunities for fishing at Moose Lake and Yellowhead Lake. Moreover, there is seasonal flyfishing on the Moose and Fraser rivers. Fishing activities are popular in the Canadian Rockies, but remember that fishing permits are required and available at the Visitor Centre. Species like Dolly Varden trout, Lake Trout, Bull Trout, Rainbow Trout, Rocky Mountain whitefish, or Kokanee Salmon are common in the streams, creeks, and pools in the park. Some fish are catch and release only, and what can you catch and release only, and what can you can try your luck at Shere Lake, Goat River, Holmes River, or Kinbasket Lake, Before you go fishing in Mount Robson, ask at the visitor center about the current regulations. Mount Robson Provincial Park is home to 42 species of mammals and 180 species of birds. marmots, or pikas are found within the national park. Due to minimal human intervention, Mount Robson is an ideal place for wildlife watching. While some are common in the park, and you have a good chance of spotting them. Remember, dusk and dawn are those two times each day the animals are most active. The best way to stay safe when watching wildlife is not to get close and give animals room to move. In the case of bears, it's better to avoid the encounter entirely. As a rule of thumb, if animals react to your presence, you are too close. Always keep a safe distance between you and the animal. If you have binoculars, don't leave them in the car. Enthusiast wildlife photographers should bring a proper telephoto lens such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such as Canon RF 100-500mm F4.5-7.1 and a camera with reliable autofocus such why not stop at these falls to witness one of the fascinating journeys in the animal kingdom? Chinook Salmon, the largest salmon species of the Pacific, travel 1300 kilometers (800 miles) upstream to return to their place of birth from the sea. Rearguard Falls is the point that marks the end of their adult journey, as only a fraction of them successfully overcomes the obstacles that Fraser River plants in their way. Watching the red-colored salmon (they change their color at the end of their lives) on their journey to spawning territory from the nicely built platform is possible at the end of their lives) on their journey to spawning territory from the nicely built platform is possible at the end of their lives) and the end of their lives at the end of their lives at the end of their lives at the end of their lives. Regional Park, right next to Valemount Visitor Center, is another great place to see the salmon run. While biking is allowed in Mount Robson Park to a degree, you won't find many trails there. In fact, it might be a better idea to go to Valemount Mountain Bike Park just northeast of the Valemount village. The first seven kilometers of the Berg Lake Trail can be covered on a bike, but that's about it. Bikes are not allowed past Kinney Lake Campground. The trail is a bit rocky, but it's not that bad after all. There is a bike rack at the campground where you can leave your bikes and continue to Berg Lake on foot. You can also explore some campground roads (Robson Meadows Campground and the Robson River Campground), but that won't suffice for serious mountain bikers. There is no way around it; you will need a car to get to Mount Robson. Luckily, in case you don't have plenty of rental companies that offer good vehicles for reasonable prices. Mount Robson Provincial Park is located 450 kilometers northwest of Edmonton, 500 kilometers northwest of Prince George, and 700 kilometers northeast of Vancouver (or 350 kilometers from Kamloops). As you can clearly see, getting to the provincial park takes a lot of time, and it makes zero sense to visit it just for a day. In this case, planning your trip carefully is essential. From Vancouver, follow the Trans-Canada Highway 5 that will take you to Tete Jaune Cache. Here, turn right onto Yellowhead Highway 16, and you will arrive at the visitors center in 10 minutes. It takes about 8 hours without making any stops to get from Vancouver to Mount Robson. From the northwest, the city of Prince George provides access to Mount Robson. From the northwest, and eventually Mount Robson. It takes about six hours to get to Mount Robson from Calgary via Trans-Canada Highway 1, Icefields Parkway, and finally, the Yellowhead Highway 16. In reality, you should allocate at least a few days to make as many stops along this scenic road as possible. We never leave home without travel insurance that was designed to cover our expenses if something goes wrong during the trip. Travel insurance for travelers to cover their trip essentials, including sports and adventure activities. SafetyWing is affordable travel insurance for backpackers, long-term travelers, and digital nomads. Travel smarter and safer! By far, the best time to visit Mount Robson Provincial Park is in the summer. Early autumn will deliver much more colorful foliage. And when the snow starts to melt, you will have the opportunity to see some mighty waterfalls. Sure, it's possible to visit Mount Robson in winter, but it's important to know that services are limited, and roads can be closed. Snowshoeing to Kinney Lake is allowed, but this is avalanche terrains (plus risks and hazards). Snowshoes and microspikes are essential winter gear in this area. The nearest towns to Mount Robson Provincial Park that offers a wider choice of hotels are either Valemount or Jasper. Choosing the best place to stay overnight before or after visiting Mount Robson depends on your travel itinerary, mostly on what direction you are coming from and where you are going next. While you can technically find a few hotels in Tete Jaune Cache, the selection is nothing to write home about. Valemount is a small village of 1000 residents and the commercial center in the area. It's a gateway to Mount Robson as it takes less than 30 minutes to get from the village to the visitor center. You will find in Valemount everything you need, hotels, gas stations, grocery stores, a pharmacy, a liquor store, or even Tim Hortons. On the other side of the valley, Jasper offers even more services than Valemount, but it's a bit further from the park (about an hour's drive). Here is our choice of the best hotels near Mount Robson Provincial Park. Valemount | Best Western Plus Valemount Inn and Suites - A typical hotel by Best Western features everything you would expect. The hotel offers on-site dining, an indoor pool with a waterslide, free Wi-Fi, or satellite TV. If you have spare time, you can walk the Cranberry Marsh Loop that starts right next to the hotel. Valemount | Rose Cottage Bed and Breakfast - If you are looking for a more personable experience rather than staying in a hotel chain, this lovely bed and breakfast in Valemount is the place to spend the night before traveling to the Mount Robson area. The hostess is amiable and helpful, and you will find there your second home while on the road. Tete Jaune Cache | Mica Mountain Lodge and Log Cabins - These nice and clean cabins is incredible and perfect for travelers looking for remote areas. Jasper | Jasper Inn and Suites - A nice modern hotel, Jasper Inn and Suites features clean rooms with a fridge, tea, and coffee-making facilities, a steam room, and a sauna. The Inn Restaurant and Lounge features a heated outdoor terrace and serves authentic Canadian cuisine. Weather can ruin your trip, especially if you are not prepared for it. Environmental factors play a huge role in the success of your trip, and you shouldn't take them lightly. In summer, expect warm days and chilly nights in the lower altitudes. Bring a lot of layers when hiking in the mountains, and don't forget to read our Canadian Rockies packing list. The weather in Mount Robson Provincial Park has a very similar character to other areas around the Canadian Rockies. The weather forecast is not often accurate, and you should expect all kinds of weather in one day. Nevertheless, make sure to pack a lightweight rain jacket; this is an absolutely essential piece of gear that you should bring for all your mountain adventures (not only to Mount Robson). Sturdy hiking boots offer better ankle coveragees, make sure to pack a lightweight rain jacket; this is an absolutely essential piece of gear that you should bring for all your mountain adventures (not only to Mount Robson). on uneven surfaces, especially if you carry a heavy backpack. Trail runners should be more than fine up to the Kinney Lake area. Bears are present in Mount Robson, and you should carry a bear spray and follow all bear restrictions and bear spray and follow all bear spray and follow all bear restrictions and bear spray and follow all bear restrictions and bear spray and follow all bear restrictions and bear spray and follow all bear spray and follow refill your reusable water bottle from the streams or use SteriPen or a water bottle with a filter for extra safety. Also, a strong sunscreen and an efficient bug repellent are must-have items. Whether you are traveling on a budget or not, it's important to know if there are any fees in the place you are about to visit. Currently, there is no entrance fee to Mount Robson Provincial Park.So, this provincial park in British Columbia is free, and it's a perfect alternative to pricey national parks.Traveling around the Canadian Rockies on a budget can be quite challenging, so it's always good to know that there are places you can visit without paying admission. However, you still need to pay for the campsites. For many, camping in the Canadian Rockies is one of the best ways to explore this incredible mountainous area. Mount Robson frontcountry camping fees range from $10 to $30 per party, per vehicle, per night. You can visit the visitor center to reserve some sites. Bears are often encountered in the area, so keep your site clean at all times. Dogs are not permitted on the trail for overnight trips. However, dogs are permitted on the trail for day hikes only but must be on a leash. Backcountry campsites can be registered in the visitor center. ROBSON MEADOWS CAMPGROUNDA snail-shell-shaped campground, Robson Meadows has plenty of spacious private campsites and offers a very peaceful experience. The campground has an excellent location just opposite Mount Robson visitors center (700 meters). Firewood is available for $10.ROBSON RIVER CAMPGROUNDThe river campground has nice private sites, and as there are fewer of them, it offers an even more intimate camping experience than the meadows campground. The fee is $28 per site per night.LUCERNE CAMPGROUNDThe campground is well-maintained and conveniently located on the road between Jasper and Mount Robson. The campground is close to the highway and train tracks; therefore, it gets noisy at night. Use earplugs. You pay $22 per night per site, so it's a bit cheaper than the other two campgrounds, though.BERG LAKE CAMPINGAll previous campgrounds offer a frontcountry experience. If you are looking for a backcountry campground, know that you can find seven campsites on the way from the visitor center to Berg Lake.You will encounter campsites in the following order: Kinney Lake Campground, with 26 sites (tent-pads) and a shelter. Kinney Lake campground has 14 sites (tent pads), and a cooking shelter as well. The site costs $10 per night. Reliable camping gear is essential in the success of your camping trip. The nights in the Canadian Rockies are cold with freezing temperatures, even in the summers. If you don't feel miserable, it's worth investing and even as shelt essentials list of the items everyone have. A 2-person lightweight tent is enough for us; make sure it's waterproof. A waterproof tary that can serve as a shelter is great front cooking solve, gas can, and cooking set. Don't leave a fully charged headlamp and foldable knife at home! Her rave resources we use and which you will need a ultralight cooking source we use and which you enging for a commodation. We prefer GetYourGuide for its easy-to-use interface and solid reputation. Another great alternative is Viator. Rental Cars: When going on a road trip, we always use Rentalcars.com, a reliable site for booking a rental car in advance. Flight Tickets: When looking for flight tickets, you ca