If your class is outgoing, consider the possibility of having your students write the stories in a very simple, but fun and effective grammar board game: First, divide your class into two teams, and have two volunteers (one from each team) come to the board. Choose one of the word items they have learned recently - for example, 'drive' - and shout it aloud. The two students should then compete to write a complete sentence with the past simple form of that verb - 'I drove to a park.'

Repeat this procedure using randomly selected words, and new volunteers for each round. Continue for six or seven rounds, and then applaud the winning team with the most points. One debate among 20th-century linguists revolved around the question of whether small children learn all verb forms as separate pieces of vocabulary or whether they deduce forms by the application of rules.
