

Continue

Death threats examples

The clock is ticking before they burst into your home in the dead of night, and we're on the verge of torching her house down to ashes and wiping out her family. Want to join Jesus in heaven? You won't be welcome in Arizona, you...be prepared for the worst. The truth will prevail, you...piece of... Patriots are closing in on you. Your kids will pay the price for your idiocy, just as your family will suffer for this. We're coming for you, you...and we have the Second Amendment to back it up. You can't escape or hide; we'll take all you communist c---suckers down. There's no place to run when you're already dead. We'll hang you for treason, and that b--- will be strung up in the state capitol. Pain is coming, and there's no escape from it. You're a criminal who deserves to be charged with treason. You've been warned, and we know what you've done. You can't hide; you're going down. We'll build the gallows, and that b--- will be executed in front of the state courthouse when this is all over. That's a promise - you're going down, and there's no escape. I'm writing to express outrage over a recent deal that has been reneged on. You've chosen to disregard it, which is unacceptable. I know some people who will soon be visiting and executing families of board members. It's crucial you think long and hard about the consequences this weekend. The end is near, and how you'll show up for your maker is what matters. Your actions are tantamount to treason against the People of Arizona. Certifying fraudulent votes is a grave betrayal. I urge you to reconsider and do the right thing. You're caught, and the evidence will be revealed. Treason has severe consequences, including death. Protect yourself by letting the truth come out during your investigation. It's only a matter of time before you're charged with treason. How much did it take for you to betray your country? I hope it was worth it, because karma is waiting for you. You're denying the public the ability to audit their elections, which is considered treasonous in my book. You've betrayed the People of Arizona and this great nation. Treason is punishable by death, and we'll find the truth. I'm sure your days are numbered, and when the evidence comes out, you'll regret your actions. When the truth is revealed, the payoffs won't be worth the prison time you'll serve. You're all going to jail, mark my words! Your treasonous lies will be exposed, and people will have to be prosecuted. I hope you come clean before it's too late. Why not confess now? You're a disgusting, cheating, lying human being. I hope you rot in jail for what you've done. When it's all said and done, people will be going to jail. I can't provide a rewritten version of this text. Is there something else I can help you with? We will not be silenced. The week ahead will reveal the truth, and you have been warned. Your actions, funded by Soros and the Clinton Foundation, have consequences. The people demand justice for the 2020 election fraud. You have ignored this reality, but it's time to face the music. Your attempts to cover up your sins will not be successful. A forensic audit is necessary, and you must cooperate. Failure to do so will lead to severe repercussions. You have shown contempt for the people of Arizona and the United States by selling them out. It's too late to hide; the truth is already out there. The Maricopa clowncar must roll on, and you will be held accountable. Your only option now is to turn yourself in and face the consequences of your actions. You have had plenty of time to repent, but instead, you chose to ignore the people's demands for justice. You are a threat to our democracy, and you will be dealt with accordingly. The people will not be silenced; we will demand answers, and we will get them. Your days of hiding are over; it's time to face the music. The speaker is outraged and demands immediate resignations from the entire board. They claim that the current members are corrupt, treasonous, and selling the country to a Chinese agent. The author threatens long prison sentences, including death or life imprisonment without parole, if the individuals do not comply with the Senate subpoena. The tone is aggressive and accusatory, with phrases like "You scumbags belong in jail" and "You f---ing morons are all going to jail." Soros has turned many people into willing accomplices to sell out their country, leaving them with no sympathy from anyone. Treasonous acts can lead to severe punishments like hanging or the guillotine. The question is, who will be the first to turn against each other? Those involved in Soros' plans are "stupid amateur criminals" who think they can hide but ultimately get exposed. At Mike Lindell's cyber symposium, many are being revealed as traitors. They're either watching in fear or trying to deny their wrongdoings. If you've committed crimes against humanity, it's impossible to escape the consequences. The justice system will not tolerate such behavior, and those who try to hide their mistakes will face misery and regret. Even on social media,libs and rinos are more vocal about their complaints than taking responsibility for their actions. What's coming is inevitable, and soon they'll face severe repercussions. Lawsuits are already on the horizon, targeting their estates after tribunals. Their families will lose everything, forcing them to get honest jobs. The author claims they're involved deeply in this situation and wants everyone to know the truth. They see those who deny it as "lying criminals" hiding information for personal gain. If there's any justice left in the world, they'll be punished accordingly. The author is determined to hold them accountable for their crimes and warns that public hangings might become a reality. I condemn your actions, which have betrayed the people you're supposed to represent and undermine America's values. Your refusal to conduct fair audits is unacceptable. You'll soon face a severe consequence. In an ideal world, traitors like you would be held accountable for their crimes. Your corruption and deceit have destroyed the America we cherish. You've ignored the crisis of election fraud, allowing corrupt politicians to steal our rights, freedoms, and livelihoods. The people demand justice, and we will not be silenced. I'm sending messages to lawmakers across the country, urging them to take action against those responsible for this travesty. The punishment for treason is severe: death. You'll face the full weight of the law, and your fate will be decided by the Secretary. You can't hide from justice forever. The truth will come to light, and when it does, you'll face the consequences of your actions. Mark my words, traitors like you will not escape accountability. Looking forward to the reckoning, [redacted] will face severe consequences for their alleged high crimes of election fraud and treason. Patriots are taking matters into their own hands, and it won't end well for those who seek to undermine the system. The Dominion system has been a point of contention, with many questioning its legitimacy. Lack of transparency and urgency in the voting process has led to concerns about the integrity of the elections. It's only a matter of time before the truth comes out, and those responsible will be held accountable. Treason is a serious offense, punishable by death. The idea of bringing back the firing squad and electrocution as punishments sends a clear message that such crimes will not be tolerated. It's imperative to take action against those who seek to disenfranchise voters and manipulate the system. This individual has made it clear that they have no qualms about resorting to underhanded tactics, and their actions will have severe consequences. The time for patience is over; it's time to fight back against those who seek to undermine our democracy. The authorities are already watching, and it's only a matter of time before [redacted] is brought to justice. Those who choose to hide the truth will face severe repercussions. It's not just about the individual but also about the complicit ones who have enabled such wrongdoing. Count on accountability, and rest assured that justice will be served. The people will not be silenced, and those responsible for the alleged election fraud and treason will face the full weight of the law. As tensions rise, I'll never vote for you again. You're an idiot thinking that election results are genuine without manipulation. Your kind is not needed in Pasco. Perhaps you're part of the fraud, and we should investigate. It's rigged, and you won't get re-elected. Keep opposing the audit, and someone in your family will have an unfortunate incident. All media knows the truth, and when heads start to roll, yours will be one too. You need to get your act together or face consequences. If you don't comply, there might be a riot. There are two sides: being blind or crooked. You must figure it out because when things escalate, I expect you to take action. You're going to be served justice if you don't cooperate. If found guilty, those involved should be publicly executed for treason. The criminal element in Georgia will serve hard time for their actions. Those who committed treason should face the consequences: public hanging or a firing squad. Prison sentences are not an option; they'll be dealt with harshly. We need to take a strong stance against those involved in treason. If they think they can get away with their crimes, they will be caught and punished. I believe that [redacted] and [redacted] should face severe consequences for their actions. We must ensure that justice is served and the rule of law is upheld. The penalty for treason is death, and those who commit it should face this fate. It's time to take a stand against these traitors and defend our country's values. We can't let them threaten our democracy and way of life. It's essential to hold people accountable for their actions, especially when it comes to election fraud. If your husband is involved in any wrongdoing, he should step down immediately and face the consequences. The American people demand justice, and we won't tolerate treasonous behavior. We need to be vigilant and protect our country from those who seek to undermine its integrity. It's time to take a firm stance against those who threaten our democracy and way of life. We must stand strong and defend our nation's values. I demand that you resign and face an investigation for alleged election fraud. The discrepancies in the data suggest potential wrongdoing, particularly with regard to Republican ballots being misprinted or altered from Trump to Biden. You are a corrupt individual who has brought shame upon our nation, and I will relish watching you face justice. Millions of people are fed up and planning action, and some even speak of civil war and revolution. You are a traitor and a liar, deserving of punishment for your crimes. Your actions have put our country in turmoil, and it's time to hold you accountable. If Trump is restored to power, public executions may be reinstated - a fitting consequence for those who commit treason. I condemn your actions and call for transparency and truth in our electoral process. You will face the consequences of your actions, and I pray for your soul. We demand justice for the people of Michigan, who have been victimized by treasonous acts against their government and way of life. The convicted traitor should face severe punishment, including public humiliation and execution, as per the law. The author warns that if the government continues to undermine democracy, there will be consequences. The recent election was marred by voter fraud, and those responsible should be held accountable. The author's family and children are at risk due to their involvement in exposing the truth about the corrupted election. However, they stand firm in their commitment to justice and accountability. The government is urged to take action against corruption and ensure that the will of the people is respected. The author hopes that those responsible for the election irregularities will be brought to justice through a fair trial. Given article text here "Believe you're so clueless." The author expresses frustration with individuals who enable and support a voting system designed to steal votes. They advocate for accountability, stating that those who condone such actions should be fired or voted out of office. The author plans to take their concerns to state legislators, pushing for fair elections and restoring trust in the process. They issue a warning, stating that those involved in vote rigging will face consequences, including possible imprisonment. The author vows to continue fighting against what they perceive as corruption and treason, ensuring that those responsible are held accountable and brought to justice. You've been accused of stealing an election and cheating the American people. This is a serious offense, punishable by law. If found guilty, you could face severe penalties, including imprisonment. The severity of the punishment depends on the specific charges brought against you. Treason, in particular, is a serious crime that can carry the death penalty. It's considered a betrayal of one's country and its people. If convicted, you could be held accountable for your actions and face justice. Law enforcement agencies are investigating these allegations, and audits are underway to verify the results of the election. It's possible that you may be summoned to testify or appear in court to explain your involvement. The consequences of your actions will have a significant impact on those affected by them. It's essential to take responsibility for your mistakes and make amends. ### We demand accountability for election tampering. The American people will not be silenced. The current regime's blatant disregard for democratic norms has left our nation reeling. We know the truth about the stolen election and those responsible must face justice. The rule of law demands punishment for treasonous actions, including the death penalty in extreme cases. We call on all law-abiding citizens to stand together against this corrupt system. It is time for accountability and restoration of trust in our democratic institutions. The harassment of scientists during the pandemic is not an isolated incident. A survey by Nature found that more than two-thirds of researchers experienced negative outcomes as a result of media appearances or social media comments, with 15% receiving death threats. High-profile examples include Anthony Fauci, Chris Whitty, and Christian Drosten, who all received threatening messages. The survey also revealed that 22% of respondents had received threats of physical or sexual violence, while six scientists reported being physically attacked. Coordinated social-media campaigns and threatening emails or phone calls are not new, but the abuse tied to the pandemic is a new and unwelcome phenomenon for many scientists. Harassment against scientists on the rise as they face growing scrutiny during pandemic. Researchers report emotional distress and physical threats after speaking to media or engaging online. The online abuse faced by women and people of color from marginalized groups has become a significant issue in the scientific community, particularly when discussing COVID-19 science. Experts have shared their experiences of being targeted by abusers who often resort to racist or sexist comments. Australian chief public health officer Theresa Tam was subjected to racism, while female scientist Kuppalli was told she "needs to go back where she came from". However, a recent survey found no clear difference in the proportion of violent threats received by men and women. Epidemiologist Gideon Meyerowitz-Katz noted that vaccines are often the subject of abuse, with vague death threats or hatred, while ivermectin has surprisingly received more passionate defence. Pharmacologist Andrew Hill faced vitriolic abuse after publishing a study on ivermectin, which suggested it showed benefits. After retracting and revising the analysis due to ethical concerns, he was bombarded with images of hanged people and coffins, with attackers threatening him and his children. In Brazil, microbiologist Natalia Pasternak has also faced online attacks for speaking out against unproven COVID-19 treatments promoted by her government. A scientist at the University of Melbourne in Australia faced intense harassment after writing a fact-checking article about COVID-19. She received threatening emails, including one that told her "Eat a bat and die, bitch". A Dutch protester even sued her for defamation over comments made on YouTube. The Australian and UK science media centers have struggled to find experts willing to comment publicly on SARS-CoV-2's origins due to fear of abuse. One expert who received abuse is Peter Daszak, president of EcoHealth Alliance in New York City. He had his address posted online, received death threats, and even got a letter with white powder sent to his home. Abuse has also come from the opposite side - researchers who believe the pandemic might have resulted from exposure to a virus at a laboratory or research site have been targeted by others for their "lab leak" hypothesis. Experts say that these abusive attacks are counterproductive and make it harder to hold people accountable. Deleting accounts or limiting engagement to avoid abuse is not an easy task, as it can lead to a daily barrage of death threats and abuse. Even the decision to delete one's account requires careful consideration. While some researchers, like Kuppalli, have taken steps to protect themselves by not responding to comments or posts when upset, others have reported more severe incidents. Trish Greenhalgh, for example, received malicious abuse from another academic, prompting her to block the abuser's followers and report the incident to their employer. Experts agree that institutions can play a crucial role in supporting scientists who face online abuse. This includes providing support staff to filter and block emails, removing researchers' contact details from institutional websites, and reporting incidents to police. Unfortunately, even when offline threats escalate, many people are not believed. However, those who report the abuse often find their employers to be supportive. According to a Nature survey, 44% of scientists who experienced online harassment never told their employer, but almost 80% of those who did found their employer to be "very" or "somewhat" supportive. In some cases, institutions have taken proactive measures to protect researchers. For instance, Tara Kirk Sell at the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security in Baltimore received a car parking space closer to her office after informing her university about online and email attacks she had faced.