But weapons and perks are only a piece of the puzzle. In order to tackle the most challenging content Destiny 2 has to offer, youll need more than just a god-rolled weapon. Youll also need a powerful build and a good usage of the different buffs and debuffs at your disposal. These are covered in separate guides: Destiny 2 Buffs and Debuffs Hopefully, deciding what weapon rolls you should keep should be much easier than before. Do keep in mind that these tables only cover damage perks, which means only half of the picture is shown (nearly all weapons can only read only cover damage perks). offer one damage perk per roll, with the other perk reserved to non-damage perks such as reload perks). For a much more comprehensive look into these and all the other types of perks, Courts Damage Buffs/Debuffs is a must. So, what are your favorite perks? Let us know in the comments below! I've been covering gaming since 2012, and some of my work has been featured by large brands, including MSN.com, Forbes, Rock Paper Shotgun, and more. I've been obsessed with Destiny 2 (and now Diablo 4) for years now, and I hope to provide new and returning players with the guides and resources I wish I had when I first started. Destiny 2's yearly expansions focus heavily on adding depth to its various systems. Armor got a massive expansion in Shadowkeep, and Stasis demonstrates a fundamental redesign in subclass customization as seen in Beyond Light. While none of these expansions added Weapons 2.0, they have certainly changed the perk meta. Weapon crafting, nerfs, and new additions can make it a royal pain to learn which ones are worth your time. Luckily, there are still plenty of options for making an optimal killing machine, ranging from damage buffs to granting ability energy. Here are the ten best perks you can find in Destiny 2. Updated September 12th, 2022, by Charles Burgar: Season of the Plunder has added some new perks into the weapon perk pool, one of which being Voltshot. This Arc-themed variant of Kill Clip is a powerhouse on any weapon it can roll on, turning your weapon into a Legendary version of Trinity Ghoul. We've updated this list to include the Voltshot perk, explaining why this type of add-clearing perk is worth chasing for PvE. 10 Rapid Hit: Rapid Hit: Rapid Hit: Rapid Precision hits temporarily increase stability and reload speed. Precision hits grant an escalating stability and reload speed bonus to your weapon for a few seconds, significantly increasing the weapon's ease of use. In PvP, the extra stability makes you far more resistant to flinch thanks to Season 17's changes to how stability works. You'll be able to out duel just about every Guardian if you have enough stacks of this perk. Subsistence: Defeating targets partially reloads the magazine from reserves. Each kill from your weapon will reload about 17% of your magazine instantly, taking that ammo from your reserves. This perk is incredibly powerful on Primaries, as Bungie removed Primaries like SMGs or Hand Cannons. Interestingly, this perk has also started to appear on Special and Heavy weapons. It can currently roll on Corrective Measure, a Heavy Machine Gun from the Vault of Glass raid. Keep an eye out for this perk on future Special and Heavy weapons, as it allows you to bypass reloading your guns entirely. Incandescent: Defeating a target spreads scorch to those nearby. More powerful combatants and opposing Guardians cause scorch in a larger radius. Incandescent is one of the best add-clearing perks in Destiny 2 and has some great build synergy with Solar subclasses. Whenever you kill someone, they'll explode and deal a small amount of damage to nearby enemies. Anyone tagged by the explosion is inflicted by 30 stacks of Scorch, a damage-over-time effect that can cause the target to explode if they hit 100 stacks. Kill four enemies close to one another, and all nearby targets will violently explode, dealing massive damage. You can use Fragments like Ember of Ashes to ramp up this perk even more, allowing you to create chain explosions with just a few kills. It's absurdly strong in PvE and has some great utility in PvP. Frenzy: Being in combat for an extended period of time increases damage, handling, and reload speed for the weapon until you're in combat if you're in combat for 12 seconds. If you're in combat for 12 seconds. If you're in combat for 12 seconds for 12 seconds are out of combat. Destiny 2 considers you to be in combat for 12 seconds. If you're in combat for 12 seconds are out of combat. long as you keep dealing and receiving damage, you'll gain the following buffs to your weapon: 15% more damage. +50 handling. +50 reload speed. This turns just about every weapons become far easier to use with the handling buff, and all weapons can benefit from a constant 15% damage buff. Frenzy isn't the strongest damage buff in Destiny 2, but it's certainly one of the easiest perks to trigger and maintain in PvE. For PvP, you're better off with Kill Clip or another damage perk. Voltshot: Reloading this weapon after defeating a target overcharges this weapon for a short period of time, causing it to jolt on its next hit. Voltshot is a perk exclusive to Arc weapons that causes them to inflict Jolt on your first shot of a fresh magazine upon killing an enemy. It's effectively an Arc-themed version of Kill Clip, yet that comparison doesn't do Voltshot justice. This perk turns your weapon into Trinity Ghoul. One shot will cause the target to chain lightning to nearby targets, dealing an immense amount of damage in all content, red bars disintegrate while majors isn't quite as strong as its Solar cousin, Incandescent. Headstone: Precision final blows spawn a Stasis crystal at the victim's location. Headstone is a Stasis version of Dragonfly, turning an enemy's corpse into a Stasis crystal at the victim's location. Headstone is a Stasis version of Dragonfly, turning an enemy's corpse into a Stasis crystal at the victim's location. as cover or destroy it, dealing shatter damage to all nearby targets. You can increase this damage with Whisper of Fissures, dealing more damage than a typical Dragonfly explosion. If you want more utility from this perk, use Whisper of Chains to gain DR while near the crystal. You can even use Headstone alongside Whisper of Shards to get grenade energy whenever you break this crystal. It's S-tier for Stasis builds in all content, PvE and PvP. Overflow: Picking up Special or Heavy brick, any weapons with Overflow will automatically reload with double their normal capacity. This allows SMGs to have up to 80 bullets, Rockets Launchers to have two rockets, and other Primaries to have an absurd magazine size. Since Special bricks are plentiful in PvP, this perk is useful in both environments. Having a weapon with twice the magazine size is amazing in most situations. Primaries can clear adds or fight multiple Guardians easier, Specials can output more damage before reloading, and Heavies like Rocket Launchers gain an immense amount of burst DPS. Keep an eye out for this perk on any guns you obtain. Rangefinder: Aiming this weapon increases its effective range and zoom magnification. Increased projectile velocity while aiming Rocket Launchers, Grenade Launchers, and Bows. If you mostly play PvE content or use projectile weapons, Rangefinder is mediocre at best. For PvP players, it's a different story. Rangefinder greatly increases the effective range of your weapon by enhancing its zoom stat. This does make your ADS FOV more narrow than normal, but the tradeoff is an immense amount of range that only Iron Reach can compete with. In Destiny 2's Crucible, range is everything. Your effective range dictates which engagements you can take, which weapons counter your aim assist is at further distances. Rangefinder lets you break the typical limits of certain weapon archetypes like 140 Hand Cannons or 540 Pulses, allowing you to duel and succeed in gunfights against weapons that'd normally have the upper hand. If you ever find a hitscan weapon that can roll with Rangefinder, take it for a spin. You might be surprised how consistent it is. Kill Clip: Reloading after a kill grants increased damage. Reloading after you kill someone will grant a 33% damage boost for five seconds. While boring by today's perk standards, Kill Clip manages to enhance any gun it rolls on with faster time to kill tougher fodder enemies in PvE or Guardians inside the Crucible. Considering most other damage perks are tougher to activate or numerically weaker, Kill Clip stands as one of Destiny 2's strongest damage perks. Explosive Payload: Projectiles create an area-of-effect detonation on impact. On the surface, Explosive Payload looks like a lackluster perk. In practice, it's a great PvE perk and arguably overpowered inside the Crucible. Explosive Payload does three things: Splits your damage between your bullet and an explosive detonation. The explosive damage doesn't suffer from damage falloff. Grants a 15% damage boost in PvE. Headshots only gain 10% bonus damage doesn't suffer from damage falloff. Grants a 15% damage boost in PvE. this many benefits passively. The extra damage makes it an excellent PvE perk for Primaries like Hand Cannons, making body shots much less punishing and one-taps more frequent. In PvP, this perk becomes extremely powerful, capable of flinching Guardians much more while extending your gun's effective dueling range. You're going to have a hard time finding a better PvP perk than this one. I've been obsessed with Destiny 2 (and now Diablo 4) for years now and I hope to provide new and returning players with the guides and resources I wish I had when I first started. Damage perks in Destiny 2 have always been the stable of the many god-rolled weapons present in the game. A lot of the time if you are hunting for a weapon to use, especially in PvE content, and it doesn't drop with damage-increasing perk, then that is almost grounds for an immediate dismantle. Damage perks simply add so much extra value to the weapon that without them, the weapon that without them, the weapon can feel a little flat. Below is a list of all the different damage perks in Destiny 2, how they are activated, how much damage they give, as well as a simple S-D tier rating. Something to keep in mind while browsing this list is that if a certain damage perk has a low rating this does not mean this perk isn't great. Pretty much all damage perks. General Damage Perks: Rampage A stack of the Rampage is buff is given for every kill gained, up to a max of three stacks. These stacks have a duration of 3.5 seconds, 4.5 seconds if using Rampage Spec, or until another kill is gained which either grants another stack or refreshes the timer. The first stack gives 10% extra damage, the second gives 21% and the third gives 33%. Rampage is an extremely versatile damage perk as even a single stack can lead to a quicker time to kill in PvP or give a nice boost to overall DPS in PvE. Its conditions to activate are extremely easy to complete and if enough enemies are around it is quite easy to keep the stacks topped off at three. Rank - AKill ClipLike Rampage, Kill Clip is another one of the original damage perks for Destiny 2 and has been around for some time. If a player reloads within a few seconds of gaining a kill, they will be granted the Kill Clip buff which gives a 33% bonus to precision damage, and 30% to body damage, and 30% to bedy damage, for five seconds. Kill Clip is more of a PvP perk compared to the Rampage which is more geared towards PvE. With Kill Clip, all you need is a single kill to then reload and be granted the same damage increase as Rampage. Oftentimes Kill Clip is paired with a reload perk like Outlaw or Rapid Hit in order to mitigate the perks weakness of needing to reload to activate the buff. This pair of perks can create a weapon that is capable of chaining kills in PvP and making 1v2s much more likely to end in victory. One aspect of Kill Clip to be aware of is that when you have the Kill Clip buff you cannot refresh it by getting a kill and reloading, you must wait for the buff. Rank - ASwashbuckler Swashbuckler functions in a similar way to Rampage but as a more close range option. This perk is able to stack up to 5 times with the stacks granting 5%, 12%, 19%, 26% and 30%. While the damage caps out slightly lower than Rampage, Swashbuckler has the advantage of any melee kill granting an instant 5 stacks also last for a slightly longer 4.5 seconds. This perk works amazingly well for melee focused builds or shotgun builds. Rank - AMultikill ClipLike Swashbuckler being similar to Rampage, Multikill Clip is a slightly different form of Kill Clip. With Multikill Clip 1-3 stacks are granted once a reload is completed after gaining a certain amount of kills. One kill will grants two stacks are granted once a reload is completed after gaining a certain amount of kills. 50% respectively. Unlike Kill Clip, the player is able to refresh the stack timer without having to wait for it to finish. However, this will refresh the stacks of Multikill Clip, kill a single enemy and then reload, the stacks will refresh down to one. Multikill Clip is one of the top tier damage perks as it is extremely easy to keep the stacks refreshed and the damage tops out at 50% which is one of the highest damage perks released during Season of the Chosen and there is a little bit of confusion amongst the community about how it works exactly. If the player has been in combat for at least 12 seconds the Frenzy buff will activate that grants a 20% damage buff to the weapon as long as the player remains in combat. What exactly is in combat if they have either taken damage, or damaged another combatant, within the last five seconds. Frenzy is an extremely top tier damage perk that is very easy to activate as to do this you essentially just do what you would normally be doing, kill enemies. This perk can even activate when the weapon is stowed which is why some double or even triple Frenzy builds are becoming popular as once the 12 seconds of combat has been reached you will receive a loadout wide 20% damage buff. While Frenzy might not give the same damage numbers as the other perks it is essentially a free and very respectable damage perk that was introduced in Season of the Chosen and in my opinion it is one of the best we have seen for some time. If a player is able to damage three separate opponents within three seconds of each other then a 35% damage buff is granted which lasts a whopping 10 seconds. This perk is very easy to activate on weapons with high fire rate like Submachine Guns or Auto Rifles as you simply sweep fire across enemies to gain the buff and then focus them down as normal. The buff will not refresh when hitting three more enemies mid timer but since it is so easy to activate this isn't really a problem. As a personal opinion I think One for All is better than Frenzy as while it might take a little bit more effort to activate, it gives an extra 15% damage. Rank - S+Situational Damage PerksSurroundedSurrounded grants 25% bonus to Sword damage and a 30% bonus to other weapons when three or more enemies are within 15m of the player. If the weapons should be cause the increased damage damage damage and a 30% bonus to supposed to cause the increased damage damage damage damage and a 30% bonus to suppose to cause the increased damage damag granted by the perk to linger for 1.5 seconds once the player is no longer surrounded but this is currently bugged. The best weapons to use this perk on are obviously close range weapons to use this perk on a close to use the perk of the pe is also a must use with this perk as while the damage linger is bugged, the actual bonus damage functions as normal. For most weapons this is an easy 40% damage buff for most encounters. The only issue with the perk is that it is hindered by enemies having to be close, if you are against a lot of ranged enemies or ones that are spread out there isn't much you can do about that and this becomes a dead perk. Rank - BVorpal Weapon Vorpal Weapon vorpal Weapon is a fairly simple perk. As it is mainly used as a PvE perk that is what I'll focus on. Vorpal Weapon gives a 15% increase to weapon damage to Bosses and Minibosses without any other kind of activation criteria. It is because of this that Vorpal Weapon is extremely popular on Boss DPS weapons like Slug Shotguns and Sniper Rifles. Since Vorpal Weapon gives bonus damage against Bosses that means that the perk can swing from being high tier to bottom tier depending on what weapon it rolls on. On something like a Sniper, which will actually be used to DPS a boss, it is very useful but Vorpal Weapon can also roll on a few Primary weapons where its usefulness plummets. Rank - A/D depending on weaponBox Breathing for one second. This bonus damage is 31% for Rapid FIre/Adaptive Frame Sniper Rifles, 37% for Aggressive Frame Sniper Rifles, 33% for Linear Fusion Rifles and 66% for Scout Rifles. On Sniper Rifles this perk is used to give a small boost to Boss DPS at the start of the damage phase and in PvP is that a significant amount of the meta weapons have a time to kill that is lower than one second so the player will most likely be dead before the perk can activate. It can be used with a Scout Rifle to hold down a lane and hope someone pops out for you to quickly kill but this will only happen once or twice before the enemy wises up. Rank - DFiring Line Firing Line is a Fireteam based perk that gives a significant boost to weapon damage when within a couple of metres of 2+ allies. Allies do not have to just be friendly Guardians but any friendly A.I such as the Frames from the Europa Lost Sector. This boost to weapon damage is 25% for Linear Fusion Rifles and Sniper Rifles, and 20% for Machine Guns. While this perk is great on paper there just aren't a whole lot of situations in the game that can be used on top of the weapons it can roll on not being meta for Boss DPS. Rank - CHigh-Impact Reserves This perk gives a scaling damage scales from 12% to 26% in PvE and 4% to 6% in PvP. While this perk requires no real effort to activate, its damage is simply not that great and only a few of the last bullets in the magazine get any kind of decent damage buff. This perk is simply outclassed by a lot of the other, better damage perks like One for All and Rampage. Rank - DExplosive Payload causes the weapons bullets to create an area of effect explosion at the point of impact. Timed Payload also gives a slightly larger damage increase at an 12% increase to precision and 16% increase to body damage.Rank - CRocket Only Damage Perks:Lasting ImpressionLasting Impression is a new Season of the Chosen perk and can only roll on Rocket Launchers. This perk causes any rockets fired to stick to its target instead of exploding instantly. This rocket will then explode after three seconds with an increased Blast Radius and dealing 25% more damage. This is a great new perk for Rocket Launchers and since they recently received a 30% damage buff this makes them fairly good at dealing with Bosses. Combine this perk with an Argent Ordnance Charged with Light build and suddenly you have a Rocket Launcher capable of ridiculous amounts of burst DPS. This perk has no real conditions that need to be met to activate. The trade off is a simple three second delay to the damage for a 25% increased damage for each hit landed. This increased damage for each hit landed. with this perk, combined with the Lucent Blade mod, are exceptional for Boss DPS. When dealing damage you want to Light Attack fives a scaling damage. Rank - AGrenade Launcher Only Damage Perks: Full Court is a Grenade Launcher only perk that gives a scaling damage bonus to rounds fired depending on how far they travel before reaching a target. This bonus damage caps out at 25% increased damage once 50m has been reached. While Full Court gives a nice damage boost without too many conditions, there isn't a whole lot of content within the game where the player is going to be able to reliably fire from over 50m away. Apart from Spike Grenades, Grenade Launchers don't really have any options to increase their damage against Bosses so if you are going for Boss DPS then Full Court is a good option. Before you get stuck in grinding for it, don't forget that Destiny 2's gear tiers, added in The Edge of Fate update, make it so you might want to increase your world tier first. Destiny 2 Phoneutria Fera PvE god roll(Image credit: Bungie)Barrel: Hammer-Forged RiflingMagazine: Accurized Rounds, Flared Magwell3rd Column: Barrel Constrictor, Threat Detector, Proximity Power4th Column: Swashbuckler, IncandescentMasterwork: Range, Reload SpeedWhile it's usually not too much trouble getting up close and personal in PvE, a shotgun pistol like the Phoneutria Fera lacks in the range department, so increasing this stat makes it much more reliable. Hammer-Forged Rifling and Accurized Rounds are the obvious picks here, significantly improving the weapon's range with no downsides. A Full Bore barrel can also work, further boosting range, but it comes with hits to stability and handling, which aren't worth the tradeoff in my eyes. Likewise, if you're finding the gun to be a little sluggish, you could swap Accurized Rounds for Flared Magwell to gain reload speed, but Phoenutria Fera's pitiful range stat needs the bump, in my experience. In the third and fourth columns, Phoneutria Fera has some fun new perks to try out, as well as some old favourites. By narrowing the pellet spread after final blows, Barrel Constrictor effectively helps improve damage outside of close range, and it's a perfect synergy with this weapon type. Likewise, Threat Detector improves reload speed, stability, and handling when you're near enemies, which should be pretty much all the time with this weapon. Increasing your melee stat when near enemies, a new perk called Proximity Power is also a great pick for melee builds. In the fourth column, I'd recommend Swashbuckler or Incandescent, depending on your builds. well with melee builds. On the other hand, Incandescent is designed with Solar builds in mind, spreading scorch to nearby enemies, though even without a Solar subclass, fiery explosions are always good fun. If you're running with Proximity Power in column fore even more melee damage.Destiny 2 Phoneutria Fera PvP god rollBarrel: Hammer-Forged RiflingMagazine: Accurized Rounds3rd Column: Slideshot4th Column: Slidesh aren't all that special here. Unsurprisingly, it starts by increasing your range using Hammer-Forged Rifling and Accurized Rounds. As in PvE, Full Bore can also work here, but it comes with drawbacks that aren't worth the bonus range compared to Hammer-Forged. When it comes with drawbacks that aren't worth the bonus range compared to Hammer-Forged. archetype. Slideshot's ability to not only partially reload the weapon when you slide, but also boost range and stability, is beautiful on a weapon like this. Barrel Constrictor is another option in this slot, but it requires you to have already bagged a kill to reap its benefits, unlike Slideshot. The final column is all about the typical shotgun-punch combo you either love or hate in PvP, depending on what end of the barrel you're on. One-Two Punch is great for quickly securing a kill after a shot, especially if you're using Barrel Constrictor to narrow the pellet spread, but I generally prefer the versatility of Frenzy, simply increasing my damage for staying in the action. Swashbuckler also works here, but it requires you to get three kills in a row to reap similar rewards to Frenzy, which isn't as easily done in PvP.Keep up to date with the most important stories and the best deals, as picked by the PC Gamer team. The image to the left shows all of the potential options for sights, magazines, and perks for a Better Devils. The last evolution of weapons in the game continue to drop with random perks, but some weapons are able to be crafted with select perks purchased with new currency introduced in The Witch Queen. It is important to note that even crafted weapons have a perk pool for each slot, and you are unable to craft a weapon with any combination of perks in the game. As you can imagine, the viability of some weapons will be heavily dictated by the perks available in a guns respective perk pool.Now that we got our history lesson out of the way lets get into which perks to look for!PvE Perks: A Tale of Two Concepts; damage and uptime. Damage is self explanatory, and refers to perks that increase a weapons damage based on activating the perk via some condition. One example of a damage perk is Kill Clip which grants a 33% precision and 30% body shot damage increase for 5 seconds once the weapon is reloaded after a kill. Uptime is not guite as clear cut as damage, and can be described as the percentage of time in which the weapon can shoot. Damage per second isn't simply fire rate multiplied by damage because a weapon needs to be reloaded. Perks that affect uptime increase reload speed or circumvent reloading by replenishing ammo in the magazine based on certain conditions. Examples of uptime perks are Outlaw, which adds 63 reload speed and a reload speed multiplier after a precision kill, and Subsistence, which replenishes 10-17% of the magazine immediately on kill.Lets Talk About DamageSelecting perks isnt as simple as having one damage and one uptime perk. It is important to think about the condition in which those perks are activated, and if that criteria can be met in the activity you are playing. For example, the perk Surrounded adds 30% damage if there are 3 enemies within 8 meters of you. When in the core strike playlist Surrounded is fantastic as you will be in this condition quite often, and your weapon will have a flat 30% damage increase most of the time. Now imagine activating Surrounded is fantastic as you will be in this condition quite often, and your weapon will have a flat 30% damage increase most of the time. kill you with one melee attack, so sorry to break it to you, but if you are playing around activating Surrounded in a Grandmaster Nightfall youll spend most of the strike waiting for your teammates to revive you. A perk such as One For All which gives a weapon a 35% damage increase for 5 seconds if 3 enemies are damaged within 3 seconds of one another is far more viable in a Grandmaster Nightfall. This is because the perk can be activated from a safe distance and reactivated once the perk expires on the plethora of high health enemies that youll run into in difficult end-game content, resulting in the 35% damage bonus being active a significant amount of time. Maximizing UptimeThe conditions in which an uptime perk is activated must be considered as well! Lets analyze the perk Outlaw which we discussed earlier. Outlaw increases the reload speed stat by 63 and a 0.9 reload duration multiplier after a precision kill. You may notice there are two different stats for weapons reload speed and is capped at 100. The higher the reload speed stat is, the faster your gun will be reloaded. The 0.9 multiplier works by mult be noted that these multipliers stack. In most PvE activities outlaw is a top tier perk. But just like damage perks, lets think about the conditions that make the perk active. There are better options than Outlaw in light level capped activities with high health enemies such as a Grandmaster Nightfall. This is because most enemies will not be killed with a single magazine of a weapon. If a gun with Outlaw is used there will be many instances in which a full magazine is shot without a precision kill and the perk is not utilized. A better option in that scenario would be Rapid Hit which builds up stacks for every precision kill and the perk is not utilized. is much easier to get value out of in a playlist with high health enemies that are not killed with one magazine because the perk only requires precision hits, not kills. Upon getting 5 stacks reload speed is increased by 54, nearly matching that of outlaw, but it is utilized far more. Another situation in which Rapid Hit is ideal over bread and butter uptime perks Outlaw and Feeding Frenzy is during boss damage. Outlaw and Feeding Frenzy depend on getting a kill to activate these perks. Meanwhile Rapid Hit is activated on precision hits, which are plentiful when shooting a boss and Rapid Hit stacks can be easily built up. This will lead to very fast reloads, an increase in your weapon uptime, and ultimately an increase in total damage during damage phases. Dont Forget About Magazines Remember the magazines in total damage during damage phases. range and stability stats, they can also affect reload speed and magazine size which can help our weapons uptime. Alloy Magazine scout RifleWhen selecting m magazine size such as Appended Mag. So Many Options, Which to Choose? The damage are two tables with 5 top perks for damage are two tables with general play where red bar enemies with lower health will be common and the right column representing boss and champion damage. Perks with stars are explained in greater detail. Firing Line This perk is ideal for boss damage during raids as it gives a flat 20% damage bonus and the perk will be easily activated due to players standing next to one another in a well of radiance during most boss damage encounters. Explosive head for bows and timed payload are subject to the same damage encounters, explosive head for bows and timed payload, so these 3 perks are just as good on a primary weapon. The perk adds a flat 30% bonus damage encounters. explosive body shot damage which does not benefit from the precision damage multiplier. Lastly the explosive damage is not subject to range fall off. One-Two Punch This one is a blast! Landing every pellet of a shotgun shot increases melee damage to bosses by 350%. Its risky to use, but during boss encounters where you can safely apply damage up close it is a good option. The general technique of using the perk is to shoot the shotgun, then melee, and repeat. With certain classes and exotics the melee damage stacks with this perk resulting in extremely high bursts of damage. Now for the uptime perks. Fourth Times The Charm This is a coveted perk for sniper and scout rifles for high health target damage. If you hit 4 precision shots, 2 shots are automatically put into the magazine. If a sniper has 6 rounds in a magazine and this perk, 10 shots can be fired before a reload by activating this perk, but the holster mode only exist for some weapon categories, most notably there is no holster mode for single shot grenade launchers. These two weapon categories, most notably there is no holster mode for single shot grenade launchers. types have extremely slow reload speeds and are good for damage. The strategy with this perk is to shoot the weapon with this perk is hit, swap back to the weapon with this perk for a free reload. This can be made even more efficient if the sniper that is being swapped to is supplemented by a holster armor mod and chain swapping auto-reloaded weapons is performed. Just My Type of WeaponJust as guns have perks, some perks, some perks have better utility on certain weapon types due to the role they serve. For example rocket launchers are best for dealing quick burst damage to bosses and champions while submachine guns are best for quickly dispatching red bar enemy kills such as outlaw, feeding frenzy, and subsistence. Rapid Hit is a great option as it gives great value when fighting higher health enemies and clearing red bar enemies. Overflow is another good option as it can greatly increase the magazine size, lessening the need to reload. The same goes for damage perks with rampage and multikill clip being ideal via activation from kills. One for all is a great option as well if red bar enemies have a little extra health in higher difficulty activities and explosive payload for that flat out 15% damage bonus. Swashbuckler and Adrenaline Junkie are great options for melee and grenade builds as weapon damage is increased with weapon or melee/grenade kills. Special weapons have a little more dichotomy between them. Fusion Rifles are a hybrid option that can be great for clearing ads yet can deal some decent boss damage. Boss damage and uptime perks are overflow, auto loading holster, and swashbuckler. Sniper Rifles are best for boss damage and have a few perks that involve precision hits to best maximize their damage. Rapid Hit, Fourth Times The Charm, and Triple Tap are great uptime perks revolving around precision hits from snipers, while Auto-Loading Holster is a great uptime perks that involve precision hits from snipers. perks are dominated by Firing Line and Vorpal Weapon as they are great boss damage options. If a sniper has access to both, Firing Line is a better option as it adds a bonus 20% damage while Vorpal Weapon adds 15% for special weapons. Shotguns can serve as boss damage dealers or ad clearing weapons. damage and uptime that are mostly activated through melee is Grave Robber and is best for use while getting melee kills on lower health enemies. Auto-Loading Holster is the uptime perk better served for boss damage. Damage perks requiring a melee are One-Two Punch and Trench Barrel, while Disruption Break is best for dealing burst damage to champions and shielded enemies. Trace Rifles do not have a row on the table as the options are through exotic weapons serve a similar role to Special Weapons as they are primarily for high health targets, but some types are good for clearing ads guickly. Linear Fusion Rifles are very similar to sniper Rifles due to the similarity between the two. Grenade Launchers are best for boss damage and their perks reflect as such. One damage perk to note is Spike Grenades. This is a magazine perk and is essential for boss damage upon direct impact which will be activated when shooting these weapons at bosses who have large hit boxes. Auto-Loading Holster is the must have perk for uptime as it increases the weapons damage upon direct impact which will be activated when shooting these weapons at bosses who have large hit boxes. these weapons do not have access to other uptime perks. Aside from Spike Grenades, Grenade Launchers are in the same category as Grenade Launchers in terms of uptime perks, as Auto-Loading Holster is the best option. There are guite a few options for damage perks though. Lasting Impression adds a delay to weapon damage but requires picking up an orb of light. Vorpal Weapon only deals an extra 10%, making it the worst of the extra damage options. Lastly there is Cluster Bombs which can add up to 24% bonus damage, but require all of the extra clusters to hit. This perk is best for bosses that are stationary and have a center of mass close to the ground to maximize damage. Swords are a decent option for damage to bosses that do not have a strong melee, champions, and mid tier enemies. Whirlwind Blade is the best option for damage as stacks can build the damage bonus to 30% and uptime perks that are best are Relentless Strikes and Tireless Blade which both refund ammo to the sword based on hits or kills respectively. Lastly we have Machine Guns. These weapons are in an odd spot as they take up the Heavy Weapon slot, but are not a good option for boss damage. These weapons are better for ad clear and dealing with mid tier enemies. Because of this role ideal Machine Gun perks are Subsistence, Overflow, Outlaw, and Auto-Loading Holster all of which are good for low health enemies with Auto-Loading Holster being a good option for all scenarios due to the slow reload time of the weapon type. Damage perks are Rampage, Kill Clip, and One For All due to limited options on the weapon type and their role of lower health enemy clearance. Closing ThoughtsHopefully now you know which perks to keep an eye out for on your new weapon drops. When choosing a damage and uptime perk think about what type of enemies youll be facing with that weapon and how those two perks, but they do not work well together as one is for headshot kills and the other is for dealing damage to a high health target. Meanwhile a combination like rampage to a high health target. and subsistence work great together because they have the same activation condition and for every kill you get a damage bonus plus some of the magazine refunded. It is also important to remember that all weapons have a perk pool, so if you are looking for a particular perk combination your options may be limited. The God Roll Finder page on light.gg is a great resource to look for weapons that can have a perk combination you are looking for. For example, there are only 3 pulse rifles in the game that can have both rampage and subsistence if thats your desired weapon. So get perk hunting and ready to flex on your clanmates when you double their kills during a Nightfall strike with your new Darkest Before pulse rifle with Rampage and Subsistence! Destiny 2 launched almost four years ago. With its release, players were pulled back into a universe of power struggles, conflicts of light and dark, and alien races. Since then, eagle-eyed fans have been able to find Easter eggs and hidden secrets across the games many locations. The Tower, which has been a social space in the game since its release, is chock full of these little secrets. Some of them can be incredibly hard to get to, while others will only require a players curiosity to find. The majority of these Easter eggs in Destiny 2's Tower come in the form of scannable items. These items contain small pieces of detail about in-game lore and certain characters throughout the game. environment pieces found there. The Courtyard The main area of the Tower is the courtyard. Here, most of the Towers vendors can be accessed as well as the Crucible and Vanguardoperations. The main area has several small details hidden about it just waiting for Guardians to scan them. Connecting the Tower and the Hangar is a bridge is a set of ventilation ducts and pipes. If players maneuver onto these pipes and ducts, they will locate a scannable. Ghost will talk about the Citys destruction and infrastructure plans to rebuild the areas that were destroyed. When players are walking from the courtyard to the bazaar, they will have to cross a bridge. Immediately after crossing this bridge, players can turn right and follow the path to a large set of doors. On the ground, Guardians will find a scannable book and Ghost will tell them of the Speakers private quarters being rebuilt. If players walk past the vendor Banshee-44 and take the stairs behind him down to the first landing, they will find a storage room. In the room is a scannable terminal that the Exo had tried to log on to. Unfortunately, he was using credentials as Banshee-41, from before his three most recent reboots, and was locked out of the terminal. store, players will find a series of pipes and vents. Sitting on the pipes is a scannable that tells Guardians of a System Engineers maintenance logs. Unfortunately, the engineers maintenance logs. Unfortunately, the engineers maintenance logs. ventilation pipe. If guardians follow this pipe and climb over the top, they can drop down to Hawthornes reading corner, some supplies, Ghost will tell them that they are stolen goods belonging to New Monarchy. At the very bottom of the gap between the courtyard and the hangar, all the way down by the yellow beams is Amanda Hollidays secret hideout. When the area is scanned, Ghost will mention that it should be kept a secret. When Guardians spawn in, there will be a section of netting directly behind them. Players can walk onto this netting and drop down to land on some poles that jut out. From there, Guardians can maneuver their way forward by crouching and walking to reach a hidden ledge. Scanning the ledge will have Ghost tell players that such places have popped up since the Cabal attacked. People use them as a place to sit and talk, working through their memories of the traumatic event. As players are walking from the Courtyard towards the bazaar, theyll be able to walk straight ahead after crossing the bridge. If Guardians continue straight instead of turning down the stairs, they can find an area with Vanguard equipment and a little lamp. This lamp can be interacted with to turn it on and off. The Towers courtyard also has a couple of minigames. Players that are looking for something to do while waiting for fireteam members to join up have an option between playing the floor is lava or unlocking a giant Traveler ball. To play The Floor is Lava in Destiny 2, Guardians have to climb up to the top level behind where they spawn and interact with the object that says, Dont Pick Me Up."

Players will then have to maneuver to one of three light columns where they will receive the Quickness buff. To unlock the giant Traveler ball, players will need to be kicked to the large circle where Lord Saladin stands during the Iron Banner. The green ball will need to be kicked down the stairs behind the Eververse store. The black ball will need to be kicked up to the bridge between Commander Zavala and Shaxx. Zavalas Office also has a few of its own Easter eggs. Guardians that enter the office can turn right to find the Speakers mask sitting in a glass display. Though the man has died, his wisdom and guidance are still important to Commander Zavala. If players turn left when they enter, on top of the shelves will be a radio. Interacting with this radio will play what sounds like Shaxxs workout mixtape. Finally, on Zavalas desk is a Newtons Cradle. Players can interact with it to get the balls swinging, doing so again will stop the cradle. The Towers Hangar is home to multiple factions, Amanda Holliday, Saint 14, and some secrets of its own. Along with the ability to summon a players jumpship, an incident counter that keeps track of how many in-game days have passed since a Guardian has died, and terminals to raise blast deflectors, the hangar has a set of its own scannables. On the stairs behind Dead Orbit, but before where Xur spawns, is a terminal containing the Dead Orbit forum. Ghost comments about the groups general nihilism and emo-ness when the terminal is scanned. Directly below the Future War Cults office is a set-up of Shaxxs Redjacks. When they are scanned, Ghost will tell the players take the stairs behind Dead Orbit up to the catwalks, they can access the equipment that hangs over Arach Jalaal. Here, someone has left some notes behind. A scan reveals that Dead Orbit and Arach Jalaal were being spied on. Taking the pathways further will take Guardians to a room with Ana Brays journal. Going further will take them into Daitos room, and following the door past there will take players into the Towers armory. Players can take the hangars catwalks to the back right corner to find a scannable about Amanda Holliday and Commander Zavalas communications. If players walk out onto the ledge by the interactable for the blast deflectors, they can turn right to follow a path to a risky jump. This jump will get players onto a platform where they can scan a stack of boxes containing Vanguard history books, many of the hangar, they can find a scannable for Amanda Hollidays biography. It is unclear who is writing it, but they clearly want to hide it from her. On the catwalk by Future War Cult just before the bridge across to Saint 14, players can climb over the railing. Here, they can scan a log of tech that Future War Cult is hiding. Some of it Ghost says he doesnt even understand. The Towers bazaar has some of the hardest-to-reach scannables out of the three locations. With difficult jumps and tight edges, they can be a pain to reach. When first entering the bazaar, immediately to the right of players is a metal gate that is partially raised. By crouching under the gate, Guardians can reach a room where a scannable about Banshee-44 is located. Also, immediately right of the Bazaars entrance and just before the raised gate is a dark nook. If players walk in, they can scan a piece about Eva Levante. Ghost confirms that she is ok, but no one has seen her in a while. If players take the stairs up to Hawthorne and continue past her, there is a patio at the top. Up here a book can be scanned. Climbing up the last wooden pole on the patios right-hand railing players can jump towards the wall and hug the edge. If they maneuver right, they can jump over the gap onto the blue awning. Here there will be a scannable for Eris Morn as Ghost wonders where she went. Players can jump from the left-hand railing behind the couches on the patio to reach Ikora Rey's balcony. There will be a scannable for Eris Morn as Ghost wonders where she went. of the Last Citys citizens to visit the tower. Behind New Monarchys opulent covered patio is a ledge that Guardians can drop down to. If this ledge is followed to the end, players can scan a set of boxes and Ghost will discuss Hawthornes influence on the people of the Tower. If players turn left when first entering the bazaar they can walk to the far corner and scan items to learn about the Towers market efforts. It seems like every vendor of the Tower is part of a group effort to revitalize what survived the Cabals attack. Finally, the Tower also contains one small resident that seems to roam through the vents and ducts. There is a striped cat in Destiny 2 that can be seen to groom itself and relax in different areas. It can be seen perched on a shelf in Zavalas office, sitting in one of the windows to the Speakers private quarters, or above the patio in the bazaar. While it would be nice if Guardians could pet or feed the Towers feline friend, it will run away when approached. So far, it doesn't seem to have taken an interest in Saint 14s pigeons and the cat most likely avoids Louis as well. Destiny 2is available now for PC, PS4, PS5, Stadia, Xbox One, and Xbox Series X/S. MORE: Destiny 2 NewsLoad More Weapon perks are an integral part of the Destiny 2 experience. But perks can be complex. Some perks can be excellent for PvE but simultaneously stink for PvP, whereas some other perks might be excellent for specific weapon types but mediocre elsewhere. In this guide, we cover every damage perk in the game and help you figure out which ones are the best suited for your needs (PvE, PvP, endgame, casual, etc). Updated as of Episode 1: Echoes. Notable perks like Bait and Switch, Repulsor Brace, and Reconstruction offer unique advantages such as increased damage, overshielfs, and self-reloading abilities, depending on the weapon type and subclass. Weapon perks play an important role in the identity of a weapon. a weapon feels and performs. While some weapons are only suitable for The Crucible, other perks are better suited in PvE. For PvE, those weapon perks are better ability regeneration, more damage, faster reload, and improve the builds by making use of subclass terms like Volatile, Scorch, Jolt, and Freeze. 10 Bait and Switch The Bait and Switch perk was originally a Vow of the Deep weapons. Bait and Switch offers an amazing 35 percent increase in damage for 10 seconds but is limited as it is only useful on heavy ammo weapons. Bait and Switch states Deal damage with all equipped weapons within a short time to give the weapon a damage boost. Some notable weapons having this perk are Cataclysmic and Apex Predator, which are some of the best DPS options in the game. Repulsor Brace is a perk that makes use of the Void Subclass verb called Overshield. It states that Defeating a void debuffed target grants an Overshield. Void Overshields are extremely helpful as they provide damage resistance as well as extra health. Repulsor Brace is a void weapon with Repulsor Brace is a void weapon with Repulsor Brace is a void weapon exclusive perk and hollowed Denial. Reconstruction used to be a raid-exclusive weapon perk for the Deep Stone Crypt weapons. However, it became available on different weapons in The Witch Queen. Reconstruction overflows the weapon, and this perk is extremely useful on special ammo and heavy ammo weapons with barely noticeable effects on primary ammo weapons. Some notable weapons having this perk are the Heritage Shotgun, Apex Predator, and the kinetic weapon, Succession. Auto-Loading Holster is one of the perks that is always a good option or a decent option. Auto-Loading Holster states that The holstered weapon is automatically reloaded after a short time. Just like Reconstruction, Auto-Loading Holster fully reloads the weapons with decent effect on Primary ammo weapons. Auto-Loading Holster fully reloads the weapon if it is holstered for 2.5 seconds. Some weapons which benefit from Auto-Loading Holster are Palmyra-B, Witherhoard, and Explosive Personality. Golden Tricorn provides the highest damage boost to a weapon possible which is 50 percent. Golden Tricorn states, Final blows with the weapon grants bonus damage. While the buff is active, grenade or melee kills of the same damage type greatly increase its damage and duration. The final blow with the weapon grants bonus damage. containing Golden Tricorn gives a 15 percent damage boost for 66 seconds, and in that 6 seconds, if you get a kill with your grenade or melee that has the same affinity as your weapon type, you get a 50 percent damage boost for 10 seconds. Frenzy is one of the best all-around perks that gives your weapon insane reload speed and handling, as well as provides a decent damage boost. It is also extremely easy to activate not even requiring a kill. Frenzy states, Being in combat for an extended time increases damage, handling, and reload for this weapon until you are out of combat. Frenzy states, Being in combat for an extended time increases damage for 12 seconds, and then it grants 15 percent damage for 12 seconds. increased weapon damage, 100 handling, and 100 reload speed for 7 seconds. Demolitionist is an ability regeneration perk that states that Kills with this weapon from reserves. Demolitionists provide 10 percent grenade energy on kills with primary ammo and heavy ammo weapons while providing 20 percent grenade energy on kills with special ammo weapons. While the grenade ability regeneration, Demolitionists second feature that it automatically reloads a weapon, is also game-changing for heavy ammo weapons, especially Rockets and Linear Fusion Rifles. are The Hothead, New Pacific Epitaph, and Judgment. Incandescent is a solar weapon exclusive perk that was launched in Season of the Haunted with the release of Solar 3.0. Incandescent states, Defeating a target spreads scorch to those nearby. final blow, Incandescent applies 30 stacks of scorch to nearby enemies in a 4-meter radius. Ember of Ashes can further improve solar builds as various fragments make use of scorch to provide better ability regeneration. Chill Clip is a stasis weapon exclusive perk that states, Direct hits with the top half of the magazine cause a detonation that slows nearby targets. Chill Clip has not yet been available on a Stasis primary ammo weapon. Chill Clip has not yet been available on a Stasis primary ammo weapon. can freeze all opponents within a 4-meter radius with just 2 hits. This is the ultimate champion counter perk, as slow can counter Unstoppable champions. Notable weapons having this perk are Riptide, Aurvandil-FR6, and Lingering Dread. Voltshot is an arc-exclusive weapon perk that was released in Season of the Plunder with the introduction of Arc 3.0. Voltshot states, Reloading this weapon after killing an enemy within the next 5 seconds grants the effect of Voltshot that you can use within the next 7 seconds. If you hit an enemy within these 7 seconds, that combatant will get jolted. Jolted is an insane arc verb that does great damage to the enemy and nearby enemies. But weapons and perks are only a piece of the puzzle. In order to tackle the most challenging content Destiny 2 has to offer, youll also need a powerful build and a good usage of the different buffs and debuffs at your disposal. These are covered in separate guides: Destiny 2 Buffs and Debuffs Hopefully, deciding what weapon rolls you should keep should be much easier than before. Do keep in mind that these tables only offer one damage perks, which means only half of the picture is shown (nearly all weapons can only offer one damage perks). For a much more comprehensive look into these and all the other types of perks, Courts Damage Buffs/Debuffs is a must. So, what are your favorite perks? Let us know in the comments below! I've been covering gaming since 2012, and some of my work has been featured by large brands, including MSN.com, Forbes, Rock Paper Shotgun, and more. I've been obsessed with Destiny 2 (and now Diablo 4) for years now, and I hope to provide new and returning players with the guides and resources I wish I had when I first started. Weapon perks in Destiny 2 are one of the easiest-to-understand systems in the game. Theyre also among the most impactful. Pursuing god-tier weapon rolls is almost more important than collecting Exotics, because having the right perk combo can drastically improve your weapons. Outside of the new Stasis subclass, perks are the most diverse and ever-expanding systems in the game. Damage buffs, explosive payloads, automated reload, and staggering effects, like the incredible All for One, every single season. So that begs the question, what are the Destiny 2 best weapon perks? Weapon perks are unique modifiers attached to Legendary and Exotic weapons. Each weapon will have between 23 perks generated at random from a specific loot pool. These perks can include: General Perks: Stat buffs that activate based on a generated at random from a specific loot pool. Perks: Damage buffs that activate based on a specific in-game condition, such as being surrounded by enemies. Rocket and Sword Damage Perks: Damage buffs exclusive to Swords or Rockets. The unfortunate thing with perks is that they are completely beholden to RNG. Yes, you can narrow down your rolls by going after specific weapons and playing Pinnacle or end-game content. However, theres no certainty that youll actually get what youre going after. The key is to keep playing and be on the lookout for weapons you want. A low-level Posterity with One For All and Opening Shot may pop during a Strike. First In, Last Out with Backup Mag and Surrounded may randomly be available at the Gunsmiths. Just combine it with a higher-level weapon and suddenly you have a top-tier killing machine at the ready. Perks and Weapon Mods generally work hand-in-hand. They both provide unique benefits, and in some cases, Weapon Mods generally work hand-in-hand. They both provide unique benefits, and in some cases, Weapon Mods generally work hand-in-hand. Generally, we recommend equipping Mods that benefit a Perk, but other than that, just look to add complimentary Mods that are even perks in Destiny 2 worth pursuing. Honestly, everything on this list can be useful depending on your situation. And there are even perks like Explosive Payload that are still really solid but didnt quite crack the top fifteen of our list. Now, as youre grinding out loot and aiming for Destiny 2 god rolls, it can become easy to be overwhelmed by the options. Which ones are good? Do I care about these perks with this weapon? To help you work through them, here are the best Weapon Perks in Destiny 2. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Breaking an enemys shield will make them more vulnerable to Kinetic damage for a brief period. Starting off our ranking at #15 is Disruption Break first arrived, it was fairly useless. It really wasnt until more Major and Champion-type enemies entered the fray that it became a must-have perk. This includes Barrier Champions, which can be an incredible pain without a powerful weapon to shred through their health bar. This perk helps alleviate that issue with a 50% increase in damage output from your Kinetic weapons after disruption. Surprisingly, this also directly affects Guardians. This means that you can break shields in Crucible and immediately affects f look to shut down an enemy combatant. Its a perfect perk for combating a popped Super or when taking on multiple Guardians simultaneously. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Rapid precision hits increase stability and reload speed temporarily. Oftentimes, any precision-fueled benefit requires you to kill an enemy. That is not the case with the Rapid Hit Perk, which only requires quick precision damage. On top of that, if you maintain your accuracy, you can stack the stability and reload speed buff up to five times. This will increase the duration of the effect, making it that much easier to keep it up. kick or overly sluggish reload animation. This will give you a far more noticeable stability or reload increase over a weapon that is somewhere in the middle or overly built around these stats. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Slowly reload the weapon automatically over time, potentially doubling your ammo capacity. Not having to concern yourself with the amount of ammo you have is an incredible benefit. With Reconstruction, your weapon can be either equipped or stowed and still activate the auto-reload. The amount of ammo and the speed does fully depend on the weapon type, but you can usually expect 12 shells every 35 seconds or so. Whats truly beneficial about this is that it has the potential to double your ammo capacity. This makes it incredibly useful for Shotguns and Fusion Rifles, which have incredibly small clips. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Increased damage against bosses, vehicles, and Guardians with their Super active. output. However, the main benefit to this 15% damage increase against bosses and minibosses is that there is no activation criteria. Thats right aside from Guardians needing to pop their Super in PvP, any Major enemies in PvE get a debuff against you. The only thing is that this Perk is not great on Primary weapons like Pulse Rifles and Auto Rifles, which have relatively low DPS. To truly get the most out of this Perk, you need to roll it on a Shotgun or Sniper Rifle. This gives you high-powered weapons either up close or from a distance, that already have relatively high DPS. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: The opening shot of an attack gains increased accuracy and damage. Opening Shot is one of the best PvP weapon perks since youll be entering and exiting combat constantly. Gaining that increased range and accuracy can make a world of difference in providing you with an advantage over your opponent. If possible, try to roll this with a Scout Rifle, Hand Cannon, or other well-balanced weapons to get the greatest benefit. Additionally, if youre patient and willing and able to pause between shots, you can activate this multiple times. That's right, it can actually activate this boost throughout a clip, without you exiting a firefight. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Create an elemental damage explosion with each final blow. Don't you just love when you lay out a wave of explosive destruction with a well-placed Grenade shell or Rocket blast? With the Chain Reaction Perk, you can do just that and then some. The key here is to land precision hits with your Power weapon to unleash it. Once you do, theres no going back, since Chain Reaction kills activate the perk again. Meaning that you can create a cascading effect in PvE and PvP. Its simply one of the best enemy clearing Perks out there. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Increase your mobility, weapon range, and handling upon successful final blows. This may be one of the best Perks for Hunters. It plays like it was designed with them in mind, with any final blow providing a massive boost to your mobility, alongside increased range and refined handling. In short, this makes you elusive but accurate for 510 seconds. The real benefit is that you can continue to stack the Perk, perpetually resetting it as long as you get kills. Its most useful in PvP, where the ability to kill and evade is vital. However, it can be a viable PvE Perk for end-game play where you cant simply bash your way through with additional damage. If you can, try to boost these stats even further, run it with a handful of handling and accuracy Armor Mods. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: When surrounded by 3 or more enemies, damage output increases by 30%. enemies get close, provides enough of a damage buff to clear Minor enemies and quickly manage Majors or Champions. And if you have the Surrounded Spec Mod equipped, you increase the damage output by an additional 5%, plus keep it for 1.5 seconds after enemies disperse. You want to run weapons like Swords, Shotguns, or Submachine Guns to get the most out of this perk. Really, the only drawback is that enemies have to be close, which can be deadly in end-game content. To compensate, equip Armor Mods that boost your Resilience and Recovery. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Kills with this weapon generates grenade (Demolitionist) or ability (Wellspring) energy. These two are similar enough to group together, with both providing decreased downtime for your abilities. For Demolitionist, any kills with the weapon will automatically reload. Wellspring, on the other hand, balances your regeneration boost between all abilities. This can be very potent if youre running increased Intellect or Discipline stats, potentially topping off a heavy recharge increase. Really, the only drawback for these Perks is that you need to be able to get kills and have to map your build-around abilities. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Draw your weapon incredibly fast. Quickdraw is a must in Crucible when running your Special weapon. Similar to Opening Shot, this gives you an edge in a 1-on-1 fight, allowing you to almost spontaneously equip the weapon. This makes it crucial for close-quarters or long-distance combat, allowing you to lay down cover fire with a Primary and quickly change tactics. The only thing well say is dont waste a Perk roll on this for PvE. You simply dont need that level of speed, even in end-game content. But if you run PvP at all, make sure you have a Secondary with it equipped. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Causes Rockets to attach to targets and create a delayed explosion with increased blast radius and damage. Any Rocket Launcher Perk that refines the shell capability is worth looking into. With Lasting Impression, the sticky rockets are useful, but its the fact that damage and the blast size are increased that makes it one of the best heavy weapon perks. Its rare to see a combo like this, with blast radius typically limiting how much damage you can do. Additionally, this requires no conditions to activate. So, try to add Charged With Light or Warmind Cell buffs through Armor Mods to amplify it even further. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: After killing a target, reload your weapon to gain increased damage for each enemy you killed. Multikill Clip is like the suped-up version of Kill Clip. It still provides a damage boost after reloading, but you can actually stack kills with this one. That means you can rack up three kills and shift the damage boost from +17% to +50%. The only caveat is that you can accidentally reset the Perk if you get fewer kills and then reload. However, the likelihood that this will happen is fairly low. And the true benefit is that you can get a buff with different killstreaks, making it far more useful and versatile. Its one of the best primary weapon Perks you can run with Assault Rifles. 3. Rampage is very similar to Multikill Clip, but activating it and stacking it is much easier. One kill can lead to a rolling increase in your time to kill, almost guaranteeing a full-stack. Additionally, if you equip the Rampage Spec Mod, youll get an additional second out of your stacks maxed out, effectively generating a DPS boost throughout a firefight. Now, this is most useful in PvE, but it can also be very effective when facing multiple Guardians in Crucible. Just make sure you can actually get a kill or opt for a different Perk roll. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Staying in combat for an extended period of time for increased damage, handling, and reload speed. Season of the Chosen brought in this confusing but incredibly beneficial Perk. Basically, after being in combat for at least twelve seconds, youll gain a 20% damage buff that remains active as long as youre in combat. This is defined by either taking damage or damaging an opponent with a five-second gap to work with. The best thing about this Perk is that it activates naturally. It can even activate while the weapon is stowed, allowing you to stack the perk multiple times. It may provide lower damage output, but it basically requires no skill test to make it usable. Image: Bungie via HGG Description: Hitting 3 enemies in quick succession grants a damage buff for 10 seconds. Once again, Season of the Chosen brought out the heavy hitters when it comes to new perks, with One for All being among the best. If you can damage three opponents within three seconds, you gain a 35% damage buff for ten seconds. The length alone here is ridiculous and in PvE content, getting hits on three opponents is perfectly doable, especially with rapid-fire weapons like Submachine Guns. Now you cant continuously refresh this buff, but once it runs out you can reactivate it within the same skirmish. Its incredibly effective and a god-tier perk roll to look for.
