The Sims 4: City Living is the earliest expansion to add a number of important features including apartments, table sales, and battered furniture. It also added the first work from home careers as well as some diverse food stalls and clothing. It's easy to forget just how many firsts this expansion brought to the game. While some of these features have since made it into subsequent packs, City Living still has a lot to offer. The city is beautiful and the apartments are very different from those in the new world of Evergreen Harbor. Here are the main features of City Living, so you can find out more about the pack before you buy it. 10 Live In The Vibrant City Of San Myshuno is the game's first city and really embraces everything city life has to offer. The neighborhoods are slightly variable in style and contain a range of different types of buildings as well as apartments and penthouses. The feel of the city is well executed and you'll notice lots of cars and traffic noise. It's a modern world but also one with a very different feel to the others in-game. There are more signs of diversity and culture here than you see elsewhere. The biggest addition to the city is apartments with leaky pipes to luxury penthouses that can be purchased as a regular home would be. Apartment living also has new drawbacks. Neighbors can be noisy, apartments can become infested with bugs and other inconveniences can occur that require intervention and sometimes a visit from the landlord. This pack is the first to introduce work from home careers and offers a social media career, art or food critic career, and political career. All three offer rabbit hole workdays or work from home tasks. Some tasks are city-specific but these are mainly tied to the political career that involves protests and speeches that occur around the city at podiums and in open areas. Around the city at podiums and in open areas. exotic food and even gain a secret spice tolerance skill. This will increase their recipe range when hoping to impress their new neighbors. San Myshuno is host to several festivals with different themes. There is a geek festival, spice festival, romance festival, humor and hijinx festival, humor and hijinx festival encourages attendees to find love. Sims can also make money by being a living statue or busking in the city. You can start your own yard sale or put your goods. There's a new karaoke skill and San Myshuno also contains a couple of bars in which you can test your skills. The karaoke machines allow sims to sing individually or with others in order to boost their talents. Once you're feeling brave enough you can put your skills to the test in the karaoke contests that are frequently run in both bars. Two new collections also come with the pack. Snowglobes can be found in boxes around the city and contain a number of snowy scenes. They can be put on shelves and admired by all. You can also find posters in the cupboard style items scattered around the city. These periodically change and reset, enabling you to build a collection of wall art. City dwellers will also see buskers, living statues, and protestors. Sims are able to engage with all these activities as well as play on the basketball courts. Along with festivals and food stalls as well as community lots, it means that the city never sleeps. Cultural diversity is the main theme that seems to run through the create-a-sim items. There are lots of casual items in a range of different styles. The wardrobe you're given looks like the range of tastes you'd find in a big city. You can also find new hairstyles, facial hair, and tattoos. The main limitation is that the vast majority of clothing is for adults and beat bearing towards females. The build and buy mode items contain some cheap and battered-looking items such as a bed, kitchen unit set, and other basics. These really help build up a cheap and basic starter home or apartment and were the first worn down items added to the game. You'll also find a range of more modern furniture and a large amount of artwork for decorating those perfect penthouses. The Sims 4 has captivated players for years with its endless customization and life simulation options. Among its many popular expansion packs, The Sims 4: City Living stands out as a must-have for players looking to infuse their Sims' lives with the energy of urban living. Released in November 2016 by Maxis and Electronic Arts, this expansion takes gameplay to a whole new level, introducing apartment living, dynamic city activities, vibrant festivals, and cultural diversity. In this article, we'll deep-dive into everything that makes City Living an essential expansion for Sims 4 enthusiasts, including its features, gameplay mechanics, and unique offerings. Source: Petey Plays It City Living is the third expansion pack for The Sims 4, a life simulation game that allows players to control the lives, careers, and relationships of their Sims. This expansion is centered on urban life, introducing the bustling city of San Myshuno, diverse cultural experiences, and new career opportunities. Whether you want your Sims to live in a penthouse overlooking the cityscape or a modest apartment, this expansion adds layers of complexity and fun to the game. The star of City Living is undoubtedly the new city world of San Myshuno. Inspired by real-world metropolises like New York, Tokyo, and Shanghai, San Myshuno consists of four unique neighborhoods, each offering a different vibe, aesthetic, and gameplay opportunities: Arts Quarter: Perfect for creative Sims, this area is filled with art galleries and vibrant graffiti. Spice Market: Known for its colorful setting, food stalls, and the lively Spice Festival. Fashion District: A hotspot for trendy Sims looking to make a splash in the social scene. Uptown: The elite neighborhood featuring luxurious high-rise apartments and the center of San Myshuno's political activity. San Myshuno is more than just a backdrop; it's a hub for all things urban. From street performances to basketball courts, it's a city brought to life with activities and details that make it feel dynamic and immersive. One of the most groundbreaking features of City Living is the introduction of apartments. Unlike traditional lots in suburban neighborhoods, apartments provide a cozier and more affordable living option for your Sims, especially those just starting in life. There are 21 pre-built apartments spread across San Myshuno's neighborhoods, catering to a wide range of budgets and tastes. Rental Costs: Apartments have monthly rent, which can vary. Affordable apartments are great for new Sims, while penthouses cater to the wealthy. Lot Traits: Apartments come with unique lot traits such as noisy neighbors, quake zones, or even helpful gnomes that repair broken objects during the night. Renovation Options: While you can't change the building's external structure, you have full freedom to remodel the interior to suit your Sim's personality. Whether dealing with broken elevators or hosting lavish rooftop parties, apartment living introduces new challenges and storytelling opportunities for players. Festivals are a standout feature of City Living. These dynamic events bring communities together and offer players numerous activities to explore. Over a two-week in-game cycle, five unique festivals occur across the city: Perfect for tech-savvy Sims, Geekcon features gaming competitions, cosplay, and opportunities to improve programming or rocket science skills. A celebration of culinary diversity, the Spice Festival lets Sims sample exotic dishes and test their spice tolerance. Winning the spicy food challenge also unlocks new recipes. This comedic battle pits Sims in a duel between the Jokesters and Pranksters. Whichever side wins gets fun rewards. A dreamy setting for lovebirds, this festival allows Sims to sample Sakura Tea, consult the Romance Guru, or embrace their romantic side. A great spot for bargain hunters, the Flea Market allows Sims to haggle for unique items and sell their unused furniture or collectibles. The addition of festivals brings a lively, interactive touch to gameplay and encourages players to explore the city with their Sims. City Living introduces three new careers that are ideal for Sims drawn to urban life. These careers also offer a unique work-from-home option, allowing for more flexibility and diverse gameplay. Social Media: Perfect for Sims with a knack for selfies and hashtags, this career involves gaining followers, hosting livestreams, and creating viral content. Politician: Aspiring politicians can rally crowds, give speeches, and advocate for important causes. This career is a great fit for persuasive Sims. Critic: Your Sim can become an Art or Food Critic, exploring cultural and culinary scenes while publishing reviews. San Myshuno buzzes with activities that capture the essence of city life. In addition to festivals, your Sims can enjoy: Playing basketball at public courts. Interacting with buskers and club events in the Fashion District. Each of these activities adds depth and detail to urban gameplay, making San Myshuno feel like more than a simple backdrop. City Living also celebrates cultural diversity, particularly through food. The city is dotted with food stalls offering cuisines from around the globe. Sims can familiarize themselves with exotic dishes, cook these dishes at home, and even develop a spice tolerance skill, particularly useful for the Spice Festival. Ramen Banh Mi Empanadas Samosas The culinary experiences in City Living not only enrich your Sims' lives but also reflect the multicultural nature of modern urban environments. Choose Your Neighborhood Wisely: Decide whether your Sim thrives in the artistic vibe of the Arts Quarter or the chic atmosphere of Uptown. City Living is considered one of the best expansion packs the game has to offer and is a must-have for any player who prefers city life over the peace and quiet of a townhouse. The Landlord NPC is added to the game as part of the apartment system, acting like a repairman, checking up on the house periodically to make sure everything is functioning properly. Living in an apartment brings about the opportunity to get to know more of your neighbors, as they live much closer than in a house. This can be a great chance to make new connections and friendships. In general, Sims are able to chat with their neighbors at the door, or even enter their apartments after a loading screen. Neighbors can sometimes be noisy and cause some disruption, for example, if the Sim is trying to sleep. If so, Sims can knock on their neighbor's door to complain about the noise. Sims can give other Sims access to their apartment at any time they wish by giving them their apartment keys. This allows for convenient and easy access for friends and family. When it comes to the building aspect of apartments, they are more limiting than other residential lots. Generally, players cannot alter the external features such as windows or outer walls, unless they have the T.O.O.L mod installed. However, players are allowed to make their own changes within the walls of the apartment, with a few minor restrictions based on some lot traits. Penthouses are a unique lot of the City Living Pack and, more specifically, of San Myshuno. There are only three of them available. Generally, penthouses are residential lots adapted for city living, as they are owned, not rented. Furthermore, penthouses have fewer building requirements than apartments and players can freely decorate the outdoor spaces as they want. The only limitation is that players must add an elevator, a recycle bin, and a mailbox for the penthouse to be playable. As these penthouses are situated on top of decorative buildings, Sims don't have any neighbors, and it's not possible to divide the penthouse space into smaller apartments do. However, it is still a great option for players who want to be in the center of the action while having the freedom to build as they wish. San Myshuno, the new world added in The Sims 4: City Living, is a world packed with lots of activities to explore. With a closer look, players will notice that there are actually 30 lots in total, making it currently the biggest world in The Sims 4. Not only is it big, but it also has many unique features to offer, making it one of the best worlds in the game. From the apartments to live in, the best part about San Myshuno is its reflection of modern cities around the world, such as Tokyo, Shanghai, and New York. Players can enjoy a stunning view of the coast and river, as well as a diverse range of activities and pre-made Sims, as expected from any multicultural city. The world is divided into four distinct neighborhoods - the Arts Quarter, Spice Market, Fashion District, and Uptown - each with their own unique theme or festivals to explore. New Venue types, namely, Arts Center and Karaoke Bars are also added with this expansion and available as pre-built lots in this world. After The Sims 3: Seasons, Festivals make a return with City Living, and are held regularly in the new city of San Myshuno. Later on, the Snowy Escape and Cottage Living expansion packs also add new festivals in their respective worlds. Five unique festivals take place in the various neighborhoods of San Myshuno respectively, throughout the two-week cycle. If a festival in another neighborhood will involve a loading screen; however, traveling to a festival and their activities, times, and other important events by checking the apartment building bulletin boards and dynamic signs in San Myshuno, as well as by keeping track of them on the calendar. However, once the festival ends, these objects and activities will despawn. There are generic objects such as food and merchandise. While these are common to all festivals, the selection of goods differs depending on the type of festival. There are also festival-specific objects that depend on the activities that take place during the festivals. Most of these objects can be purchased from the buy menu. The festivals at San Myshuno can be summarized as below: Name Location Schedule Description Main Activities Humor and Hijinks Arts Quarter Monday 5:00 PM - 11:00 PM Geekcon Fashion District Tuesday 10:00 AM - 4:00 PM Geekcons are quite similar to gaming and pop-culture conventions. Ultimate Gaming Test - Sims are required to play multiple games to win the competition. (Video Gaming Skill) Hackathon - Sims can use the glowing computers to participate in this competition. (Programming Skill) Some sims will appear as cosplayers that other Sims can interact with. Spice Festival Spice Festival Spice Festival is a food-focused event which all about experiencing new option for their Sims to work from home, where they must complete tasks until the next work day in order to maintain their job performance. An hour prior to work, or take the day off. Critic In-game description: Everyone has an opinion. But not everyone is paid to have it! Sims who feel they have superior judgment can enter the Critic Career. Whether it's the foods or the arts, your Sim will have something to say about it, and others WILL listen. Critic career is an ideal option for Sims who have an interest in culinary, arts, and writing. This career has two branches: Food Critic and Arts Critic. A Food Critic will need to review the food they eat and write a review, while an Arts Critic required, while Arts Critic requires Painting Skills in the related field in order to be successful. For example, for the Sim to have skills in the related field in order to be successful. For example, for the Sim to have skills in the related field in order to be successful. For example, for the Food Critic branch, cooking, Gourmet Cooking and Writing skills are required, while Arts Critic requires Painting Music or Comedy and Writing skills to be able to be promoted. Promotion rewards are generally not very impressive and usually consist of decor items. Politician In-game description: Join a life of public service! From protesting against the unjust, to gathering donations for good causes, or even collecting the occasional bribe as a "means to an end", Politics is always interesting. Politicians in The Sims 4 are passionate about good causes, providing a great opportunity for Sims that are interested in being active in the city to meet new people and make connections, as this will be required to reach their goals. To get promoted in this career, Sims must have Charisma skill and be willing to engage in many conversations with other Sims. When the Sim begins this career, they will be asked to choose a cause to pursue. The Politician career branch focuses on collecting donations for a particular cause. If players have Get Famous pack, they can organize Charity Benefit Parties, and if the social event is successful, they will be getting donations. In-game description: What's trending? Where's the best food in town? Who's the most interesting celebrity? Start a career in Social Media to be the person that answers these questions for their followers. Blog and check-in at venues to keep followers coming back for more. Social Media career could be an exciting opportunity for Sims that are interested in getting followers and unlocking social interactions based on their career level. Sims can choose from two career branches, either Internet Personality or Public Relations. Public Relations focus primarily on Charisma and Writing skills to represent the reputations of other Sims, such as friends or celebrities. Alternatively, Internet personalities act as content creators and hosting Charity Streams. The free update for the Base Game near the release of City Living included Lot Traits, with many of the apartments having locked traits. However, it is possible to change the lot traits of any lot to better suit the needs of the Sims living in it via the Buy/Build menu. These traits already included in the base game and other packs, City Living brings an even larger variety, suited mainly for apartments. These traits ranged from negative ones such as the Quake Zone, to more beneficial ones such as the Gnomes, who will repair broken objects during the night. As The Sims 4 franchise has continued to grow over time, an update to the Lot Traits was released in July 2021 with patch 115. Lot Traits and Lot Challenges have now been separated based on whether they bring positive or negative effects. Players can still find them both under the same menu, giving them the ability to customize their lot even further by picking more Lot Traits and Lot Challenges. As City living brings Karaoke Bars, it only makes sense that Sims can utilize karaoke to show off their singing skills and make some money. To be able to make money from Singing, however, Sims need to have at least Level 9 Singing is not the best career for earning the most money, but with some additional skills in instruments such as the guitar or the violin, it can be a great source of passive income similar to other skills that generate royalties. There are many ways to improve the Singing skill, such as using a karaoke machine, practicing alone, singing in the shower, and serenading. As the Sims level up in Singing, their voice range will become wider and more pleasant to listen to, and they will unlock different songs from various genres. Interestingly, Singing is considered an instrument in The Sims 4, similar to a guitar, piano, pipe organ, or violin, and it counts towards the progression in the Musical Genius Aspiration. The Unflirty trait adds an interesting dynamic to the gameplay of the Sims, surprisingly making in-game romantic reactions more realistic. While it is still possible to get these sims to be flirty, they don't naturally do so, and rarely will they perform autonomous flirty actions. This can be helpful to players who prefer to leave their sims to their own autonomy, as they won't be randomly flirting with other sims. This is great for a sim who enjoys exploring the city and festivals, as they wouldn't be inundated with unwanted flirty interactions. However, they may feel uncomfortable and have negative moodlets when other sims perform romantic reactions with them. Understandably, this trait is in conflict with the Romantic trait. Unflirty In-Game Description: These Sims get Tense around Flirty Sims and seldom get Flirty themselves. It's difficult for them to be Romantic in public Emotional City Native Aspiration is all about discovering the different neighborhoods and festivals San Myshuno has to offer. The first step involves exploring the city and making friends, while later steps require Sims to visit every festival in San Myshuno, as well as experience the new features brought in City Living pack, such as singing and making enough money to afford an apartment worth 100,000 simoleons. Completing the last step of this aspiration is suitable for any Sim and gameplay style, since it focuses on experiencing festivals. The careers brought by this pack also align well with this aspiration, since they often require Sims to be out in the city, using their Charisma skill and interacting with others, which will help them make money to complete the final step. As a reward for completing this aspiration, Sims will get the In The Know reward trait, which will help them haggle with vendors for lower prices - although this trait might not be particularly beneficial considering the fact that Sims already own a very expensive apartment. Ultimately, the real reward of this Aspiration is the chance to experience everything the pack has to offer. The Sims 4 City Living introduces over 140 new CAS items, providing players with an array of diverse outfits and hairstyles that reflect the multicultural atmosphere of San Myshuno and its outgoing lifestyle. Among many things, new arm tattoos are included, adding a unique and personal touch to these Sims. The Sims 4 City Living introduces an impressive selection of over 300 new Build/Buy Items, from basic and functional to luxurious. These items can help to add unique character to your Sims' apartments. Additionally, there are also new items such as game consoles, which can be used for Sims to play games with their friends, and keyboards to help them increase their piano skill. The Sims 4 is available now for PC, PS4, PS5, Xbox One, and Xbox Series X/S The following is a list of some of the new features that come with new DLC: The Sims 4 City Living. Here are some of new important features; 1-) A New City 2-) Tourists 3-) Apartments and Penthouses 4-) Power outages, roach infestations 5-) Video game consoles for groups to play together 6-) Basketball 7-) Bubble Hookahs 8.) Street Art 9-) Cultural Events like eating contests 10-) Politics Career that appears to be interactive 11-) Fireworks New Traits This was included as a free update for every Sims 4 owner. Some apartments come with predetermined traits that are locked, though you can change your lot's traits at any time. These provide skill boosts, and may allow you to make your building have some supernatural effects, such as gremlins or gnomes that either damage or repair objects overnight. Buildings can be earthquake-prone, have nice breezes that give your Sims a boost to exercise, or nice lighting for painting. Multiple births are also supported if your apartment or house is built on a ley line. Lot traits are changed by clicking the info panel in the top left when you're in build mode. Hover over them and click the X, unless it's one that is permanent (such as the apartment being an historical site). Apartments Apartments are a new feature in this Expansion Pack. You can rent one of several apartments in different neighborhoods in the city, with different rental expenses. Apartments allow you to use an elevator to leave the building fans will have to get creative to make efficient use of the available space. As your family grows, you're likely to need a much bigger and more expensive apartment. Naturally, you can choose a furnished option when you initially put down the deposit, but you will have to pay for those items' value. Sims on a tight budget may want to buy items as they need them. A downside to apartments that seemingly could've been avoided is that players cannot simply walk into the neighbor's apartment. You're able to socialize with them in the hall or knock for a little chat, but going inside to visit does require a loading screen. See festivals for other explanations about loading screens that pertain to this DLC. New City The new city is a great backdrop for living out your Sims' lives. The developer definitely pulled off a city vibe, as traffic goes by in the background, the great skyline and Sims going about their daily lives all contribute to this feeling. In certain areas, Sims can partake in street painting, or buy street food from a vendor. Overall it's nice to be able to get away from the base game's small towns, and you can certainly alter some of the city to suit your design whims. Just to be clear though, you won't be able to plop skyscrapers anywhere you want - you'll build around them, there are plenty of tourists, street performers, and human statues your Sim can meet. This makes each day in the city just a bit more interesting, as city life should be. Festivals Festivals are held regularly in San Myshuno. The new city's various neighborhood, you can visit it at the designated time without any loading screen. Traveling to a festival in another neighborhood does impose a loading screen, though in my experience they were indeed brief. Festivals last several hours and give your Sims something different to do, allowing them to connect with others Sims and sometimes enter into competitions with prizes. Checking the bulletin board outside your Sim's apartment will notify you of any upcoming festivals. New Careers City Living features three new Careers - Politician (Activist), Critic, and Social Media. All three are fitting for the city life. A new feature for these careers is the ability to work from home. Each day, before your Sim leaves for work, you get to choose if it's a day they'll go in to the office, take the day off, or else work from home. Each of these have two branches like usual, so you can take the career into an entirely different direction. Hey Simmers! This is the last PC pack in the franchise to contain a disc with its physical release in some countries such as Australia, most likely due to newly made laptops being released without disc drives as a result of the increasing rise of people purchasing or viewing games, movies, TV series, and other entertainment media via streaming or online downloads. The vegetarian trait was originally included in City Living, but it was later added to the base game in patch 115. This is the last pack to be sold at Target Australia due to the discontinuation of PC video games in the retail department chain in early 2017.
