Gp aragon 2025

Motorland Aragon is one of those modern circuits out there, and it's also known as Ciudad del Motor de Aragón. Located in Spain, this circuit opened ten years ago, and it hosted significant events like the World Series by Renault amongst others. There are two versions of this circuit, depending on the type of event. For MotoGP races, its track length is 5.078 km. Jorge Lorenzo holds the lap record of 1:46.120 set in 2015. Schedule & Dates This event is usually held towards late September. 2012's edition, though, happened so late that September almost concluded. This event occurred on 30 August. 2025's timetable of the race is scheduled for 17 August 2025. Aragon MotoGP Riders & Teams This year's edition is expected to be a straight battle between Marc Marquez and the rest of the pack. Marquez boasts an impressive form lately, and he is now aiming for a fourth consecutive Riders' Championship title. Unsurprisingly, the 26-year-old has been able to pick up four wins in the MotoGP class, which is twice that of Jorge Lorenzo who comes second. Marquez is also aiming to pick up his fourth consecutive success at Aragon. Andrea Dovizioso has been enjoying a healthy 2025, and he remains without a chance of winning the title. He got a podium at this event for the first time in his career. He also set the fastest lap. Lorenzo wasn't taken into account for the Rider's Championship title for 2022, but he cannot be looked down upon when it comes to this event. Lorenzo qualified on pole position with his Ducati last season, while he finished on the podium in seven consecutive seasons before his run came to an end last year. It would be hard to look down upon an experienced campaigner for this race, but he has made it into the first 10 this season. Andrea Iannone made the most of his impressive speed last season by reaching podium places, but 2025 will be so far been a struggle for the Italian. His Aprilia has let him down on multiple occasions, and he has not been able to finish higher than 10th this season. It may not be a great pick to back the 30-year-old in the betting markets. Alex Rins has had a strong 2022 with the Suzuki that has helped him pick up two wins already this season. His success at the British Grand Prix at Silverstone was quite impressive, and this alone places him in a very strong position concerning this race. Rins has been unable to step on the podium at Aragon, but he will be camping for success in 2025. Spain, unsurprisingly, has contributed a significant chunk of the success at this event with 19 wins. Italy comes a distant second with only two wins, but none have been in the MotoGP class. In such a case, Australia would come second with two wins in this top class. A vibrant race that met its host circuit for the first time in 2010, the Aragon Grand Prix is held at the MotorLand Aragon. This is a circuit that still maintains the rich history of racing in the circuit and is housed in a facility with 3 main zones - a technology park, a sports area (where the circuit is located) and a leisure and culture area, and was designed by Hermann Tilke, Formula 1 driver Pedro de la Rosa, and a British architectural firm. The facility includes commercial businesses such as a hotel and shopping spots, which mean that your experience goes beyond the circuit. Having the Aragon MotoGP™ tickets gives you the opportunity to witness a unique circuit compared to others because it can split into 2 independent circuits. This gives the added advantage of having different configurations depending on the circuit type that the event uses.Spectators of this thrilling race can expect an adrenaline-filled race at the Motorland Aragon, with its height difference of 50m from the highest to the lowest point. This dramatic difference gives spectators a fabulous view of the race, thus allowing for an exhilarating experience. One specific spot to pay attention to is Turn 15, a 90-degree curve that tests the riders' skills as it goes straight into the circuit's longest straight. This is where most overtaking occurs and is definitely a hot spot for both riders and fans. Great weather, electrifying racing, and passionate fans - all the elements are locked in for THE experience of a lifetime. Choose your preferred spot to catch the race from and score your Aragon MotoGP™ tickets now! You have a wide selection of Grandstand tickets, with a different view of the circuit from each one, and also General Admission tickets, which allow you the freedom of searching for the ideal location.DORNA is only the organizer of the MotoGP™ Championship and does not issue tickets to access the circuits.
