The owners share their journey from their first location to their current facility, emphasizing their commitment to community outreach and support for various charitable causes. They discuss the range of gymnastics classes offered for children of all ages and the importance of fostering a positive environment for youth development. takeawaysStar Bound Academy started in 1995 behind the police barracks in Bridgeton. The facility has grown significantly since its inception, moving locations due to circumstances like a fire. The owners believe in giving back to the community and support various charitable organizations. They host events like the Starstruck Invitational to raise funds for causes like Wounded Warriors. The academy offers classes starting from 18 months old, catering to a wide age range. They have a strong competitive program with athletes achieving national and regional recognition. Community involvement is a core value, with initiatives like Code Blue and food banks. The facility is known for its friendly atmosphere and welcoming environment for children. They offer birthday parties and classes every day except Sundays. The owners are passionate about making a positive impact on the youth in their community.
