He is a former physics professor at San Diego State University, and helped disclose science on Discovery Channel. He is the author of a series of theme physics books including taking the Quantum Leap (1981), The Dreaming Universe (1994), mind in the matter (2000), and Time Loops and Space Scene Shots (2011 ). [1] Wolf was a member in 1970, with Jack Sarfatti and the others, of the fundamental Fysiks group of the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory founded in May 1975 by Elizabeth Rauscher and George Weissmann. [2] The theories of him about the interrelation of consciousness and quantum physics have been described by Newsweek in 2007 as "on the margins of traditional science." [3] Biography Born in a Jewish family, [4] Wolf's interest in Physics began as a child when he saw a newsrest depicting atomic explosion in the world. Wolf has received his Ph.D. in theoretical physics at UCLA in 1963 and began to search for the field of high-party atmospheric behavior after a nuclear explosion, [5] It appeared as the physical resident of the discovery channel area of the Know area, was a participant in the PBS series near the truth, [6] and appeared on Talk Shows radio and television programs in the United States and abroad . [5] He also appeared in the movies What the Bleep Do We Know!? (2004), [7] The Secret (2006) and Spirit Space (2008), [8] He held conferences on issues related to quantum physics and consciousness since 1960, often under the name of Dr. Quantum or Captain Quantum. [9] He is also present in the documentary on the Dalai Lama, entitled Dalai Lama Renaissance. [10] His book by taking the Quantum Leap: the new physics for non-scientists won a 1982 US National Book Award in Sciences [11] [A] taught at San Diego State University, the University of Paris, the University Jewish of Jerusalem, university. of London, the University of Paris in Orsay and Birkbeck College in London.
