The event takes place at 01:00 to 03:13. Start from fireworks and they are suddenly kidnapped by a UFO along with many of cannabis plants. It also has a themed song that does not appear in the theatrical cut. [2] After the opening credits, there is a scene that does not appear in the theatrical cutting that establishes that extraterrestrials came to land in search of diamonds, "the main source of energy" on the ASP planet. [3] After Cheech and Chong Sifon Gas for the car of their neighbor, the shots under the hood are seen, showing the losing gas and then turned on flames, rather than the explosion caused by Chong lighting a game inside of the car. [4] It is said that Cheech and Chong are running a teen center and a playground, which is referenced throughout the modification of television and a sign for this is shown repeatedly. [5] Cheech and Chong's neighborhood is proven to have a job as a piano teacher, and a lesson that he is giving to a neighborhood teenager is interrupted by the Chong guitar. [6] After the slot machine of prop slot machine from a set of films falls into the nearby, and raise it from him, threatens to cause them, claiming that the prop wounded his hands, which would have prevented him from playing the piano as Part of his work, but offered to call the cause if Cheech and Chong allowed him to have the rare cheech costumes stole from the film's studio. [7] Instead of teaching Chong the phrase "Hey, Pendejo", the line is resized as "Hey, Paisano". It did not include the television cut of the film or any deleted scenes.[22] Critical reception Roger Ebert's review was negative, writing: "This movie is embarrassing. This time, Cheech must deal with an angry neighbor and losing his job, all while trying to score with a sexy young lady. Meanwhile, Chong meets Cheech's cousin, Red (Cheech Marin in a dual role), and the two new buds have a wild time buzzing around Hollyweird, in a bad Ferrari. July 23, 1980. Ontiveros as Old Lady Release Television edit The television edit of the film, in addition to being for content such as the removal of all sequences in which characters are seen smoking cannabis, contained many extended and additional scenes, and alternate dialogue, as well as a different music score. ^ Mills, David (June 15, 1991). "Film: Cheech and Chong Make Their 'Next Movie'". The Washington Post. There's no invention in it, no imagination, no new comic vision, no ideas about what might be really funny -- instead of just dope-funny, something to laugh at if you're the bag anyway.[23] Gene Siskel gave the film two-and-a-half stars out of four and wrote that it was "much better" than Up in Smoke, "which isn't saying that much. "Cheech and Chong's Next Movie (1980) CHEECH AND CHONG MAKE THEIR 'NEXT MOVIE'". The receptionist is holding his luggage, consisting of a boom-box, a suitcase, and a 20-pound canvas bag full of high-grade marijuana, hostage and Red can't afford the bill. Internet Archive. Along the way, the dynamic duo find time for some mishaps at a movie set, the welfare office, a brothel, a music store, a rich girl's house, a comedy club, the ultimate weed field and a UFO! All before the second reel! It's an outrageous comedy that you and your friends will be toking about for a long time. They then play a recording from Red's boombox that Red recorded earlier when the police arrived at the hotel he was staying at over the dispute with his luggage, which scares everyone off. ^ Canby, Vincent (July 19, 1980). The doped-up duo are expelled from the building and, in an attempt to find alternative means of income start writing songs like, "Mexican Americans" and "Beaners." Cheech answers the phone call from Donna, sets up a date, and goes to tell Chong to get lost so he can clean the house and get ready for Donna. The phone rings again with Cheech thinking it's Donna and turns out to be Red, Cheech's "kinda" cousin, with money problems and a plea for help. Event occurs at 08:28 to 09:45. Variety. Cheech asks Chong to pick up his cousin and hang out with him as Cheech informs him they have similar interests like "go to clubs," "get plenty of chicks," and "likes to get high." Chong heads off to the hotel where Red is staying and arrives to find him in a dispute with the receptionist over how much the room is costing ("$37.50 a week, not a goddamned day!"). Event occurs at 01:13:57 to 01:14:46. This edit removed Charlie's wife smoking cannabis in the car.[17] When Red performs the Mexico joke at The Comedy House, the line "donkey's balls" is redubbed as "donkey's tail".[18] When Chong gets on the stage, the sequence in which he repeats Red's magic trick of turning a glass "into a dick" is removed, and there is an alternate scene in which Chong comically hits the masculine lady wrestler on the head to no effect; she does not break the glass.[19] When Red and Chong are abducted by the extraterrestrials, additional dialogue is dubbed in, and there is an additional scene with Red and Chong on the space ik¼Å ...
