Declarations can be changed to questions. When we convert a statement into a question, we must make some changes. One way to do this is to change the word order by putting the verb at the beginning of the sentence and thus adding a question mark to the end, like this: $\hat{A} \in \hat{a}, \neg$ "is interested in animals. $\hat{A} \in \hat{a}, \neg$ "It is interested in animals? Sometimes, you need to change the verb and add a word to more to ask a question, like this: $\hat{A} \in \hat{a}, \neg$ "have enjoyed ballet." Become $\hat{A} \in \hat{a}, \neg \hat{A}$ "Did enjoying ballet? »For some practice, try to change these statements in questions: 1. The bus is going to the station. 2. Get enough exercise. 3. This train stops at the central station. 4. Love to eat chocolate. Now try to change these questions in statements: 1. Can we go to school? 2. Will you arrive late? 3. Did you take your train? 4. Was he cycling in all that rain? 5. Do they have a cat? Don't forget that you will need to read your questions and statements to make sure they make sense and do not require any extra change.
