What skills to put on resume reddit

I'm putting together the Job Hunt issue of a college newspaper, and would love to feature top resume tips. Just browsing r/resumes today, I've already seen a few good ones:Put your resume in PDF format, because a Word doc will include red and green underlines. This can also help avoid formatting issues. EDIT Recruiters may not have the capabilities to scan PDF documents properly. Use this tip with caution!Create a Skills section with very specific details (ie: not "hard worker") to showcase what you know.Jokes are, in general, a resume no-no. It looks very unprofessional and shows you're not serious about the position.Add keywords to the footer of your resume (white, size 1 font). Resume-scanning software will see the keywords, but human recruiters won't. Redditors report that this can really increase the number of calls you get, as more recruiters are seeing their resumes.Do you guys have any more tips for college-aged (and older, possibly second-career) students looking to break into the workforce? I'll be sure to give credit to everyone who submits a tip, and I'll post a link to the article when it goes in (late March).Thanks a lot!EDIT: Thank you so much for all your answers! There are lots of great tips in here for anybody searching for a job. This subreddit is fantastic.Page 2 31 comments Listing a bunch of protocols/specific equipment/OSes/languages/software can really get out of control, so what do you like to list on your resume? Do you tailor your resume depending on the job, and only include relevant information? ThanksPage 2Posted by8 years ago 9 comments
