From Katelyn Kelley HTML (HyperText Markup Language) is used to create web pages. It is based on text, but includes "tags" that define how text on a web page is displayed. But because the HTML codes are hidden from the browser Web, you can copy the text viewable from the browser window and paste it into any application that accepts the text, such as the free editor included with Windows (notepad) or Macintosh OSX (TextEdit). Some web browsers can also save HTML pages as text without tags. Open the HMTL document or the web page you want to convert to text into the web browser software. Click on the File menu and select "Save as" (or page menu and "Save as" in Internet Explorer). Choose "Text Pages" from the drop-down menu and choose a destination for the text file. Click "Save", then exit the browser and locate the saved text file. You can open this in any application that can read a text file as a notepad in Windows. Some text editors that read the saved HTML file may display it without trolley return or row interruptions. If it happens, try the next method. Open the HMTL document or the web page you want to convert to text into the web browser software. Click and drag the text you want to convert or press CTRL + A (Command + A to Macintosh) to select the entire page. Click on the "Edit" menu, then "Copy". Open the Notepad (Windows) application or the TextEdit (Macintosh) application and click "Paste" under the "Edit" menu. Now you will have the text content of the web page in the text editor window. Click the "File" menu, then "Save As" to save the new document as a text file, and you will have successfully converted the HTML Web page to text. Of Michael Davidson I Subject Series on White - Audio Picture of Aleksandr Ugorenkov From Fotolia.com Transcript is a very important ability in many efforts and businesses. The conversion of the speech to the text can be carried out automatically or manually, but in both ways, speed and accuracy are vital. Manual transcription is an ability that court reporters and administrative assistants use based on day by day and requires significant practice and experience to master effectively. Transcription programs are sometimes useful, but greatly depends on the clarity of the original voice source, since a program will not interpret dialects or low vocal quality as the human ear can. In both cases, the conversion of the discourse recorded to the text requires patience. Play recording and type the words that are talking as you can better in a word processing program on a computer. You may need to stop recording from time to time to recover. If you are not good at typing you See if a friend can do the typing for you. Perform a spell check on the transcript after typing to find and correct any errors. Play the recording and read along with the speech. Fix any error you find as you go through to ensure accuracy. Download the voice recognition software. Wave to Text is a program program it offers a limited version of its free software that transcribes voice to text. Dragon NaturallySpeaking is another program that boasts a 99% accuracy rate when converting speech into text. Install the program on your system. Activate the software and play the recording in a microphone so that the software can take it. The software will then convert what "heard" into the text that you can go back and edit as needed. If you have a PDF file you need to convert with simple text (or HTML), email to Adobe and send it back converted. For normal text, email the PDF attached to pdf2txt@adobe.com, for HTML , pdf2html@adobe.com. Take care: "Adobe may occasionally access the content in which they are subjected to quality control and the administration of the conversion service." More information Voicemail-to-Text services create a written version of voice messages on your smartphone. Although the transcription can always be 100% accurate, usually gives a good sense of what a message is about. Voicemail to text, also known as transcript of voice messages or visual voicemail, is available on many iPhone and Android devices. Visual answering services are generally disciplined by the contract stipulated with the mobile operator, not with the device manufacturer. These instructions work with an iPhone 6S or later with iOS 10 or later. Here's how to use the answering machine to send messages to an iPhone. Open the phone app. Tap Voicemail at the bottom of the screen. Touch a voice message. A text paragraph should look just above the Play button. It is the transcription of the secretariat. You may find that there are some inaccuracies in transcription, but you should be able to get a general idea of what the message concerns. You can still listen to the message by tapping the Play icon. If you wish, you can share the feedback with Apple on the transcription utility by touching the useful or non-useful blue links under the text of the transcription. You can decide whether to keep the answering machine, follow it or delete it. If you want to save a copy of the transcription, touch the icon saves an open box with an arrow facing the high in the upper right corner of the voice message. After that, choose Notes to save the message in text or voice memos to save the message in audio format. You can also share a voice message with someone using messages or mail or save it in a file management system like Dropbox. These options are also found in the Save window. To use the visual answering machine on your Android phone, first check with your operator to confirm that it supports it. T-Mobile users can access them in the Voicemail visual area of their Google Phone app. Other carriers may request to download their answering machine app to access the transcription of the answering machine, in which case the service could be supplied with a monthly fee. If you don't want to pay the fee, you can use YouMail, Google Voice, or another application to get the transcriptions of the secretariat. Here's how to configure it for free Google Voice: Visit voice.google.com in your browser. Tap Continue to accept the Terms and Conditions. Enter a city or prefix and select a city from the list displayed. Select a phone number from the list. Follow the steps to check your existing phone number.
