It was there where his younger brother Mathias died 1943. Edward is enthusiastic and becomes a keen follower of Marx and Lenin. Libimbi appeard to be a good teacher, Lenin would have been proud of him. And being an experienced man, Libimbi knew, the inconveniences were about to come.Libimbi recovered from his wounds and gathered forces and money until 1949 in the preparation of his strike in Tawinga district. With the help of his communist supporters Kazirumimba started to reform the school system and to revive the petrochemical and mining industry.There is a peculiar relationship between communist Kazirumimba and catholic church, especially the Dominican order, which had a major influence in Kazirumimba's education and saved his life after his defeat in 1957. A fierce fight evolved and before Emurus got slaughtered by Portuguese troops Edwards brother Marcus got killed in front of Edwards eyes. To Edwards major surprise, both of them recieved shelter, food and medical help there, for Libimbi seemed to be a well known person there.During their trial and their stay in the convent, Libimbi found out Edwards identity, beeing very surprised to hear about the fate of the children of chief Kazirumimba whom he knew personally. Short before the fall of British colony in 1952 the Britons started to support colonel Bosambo and his nationalist Maswe movement. Kazirumimbas brutal combat squads do not dare any attacks on the church institutions, for Kazirumimba keeps protecting them and the punishments for such attacks are most unpleasant.Jonas Libimbi keeps a low profile position as officer of I Air Force Yabantu Base Molambe and as administrator of a poor northen Molambese province Tawinga, where he keeps certain secret state business going *) to the amazement of British government, the scientist of the Royal Etymologyst Society found out, that terminus 'Hard Stone' is a synonym for diamond in the northern Emuru dialect. Libimbi himself, took advantage of his reputation within resistance, joined Bosambo and entered service in new established Forces Aeriennes du Molambe. Beeing of economical mind, Libimbi knew, that creation of any state, no matter how altruistic it might be, costs money. Edward was 11 years by then and his squad of illiterate children had been used by its Portuguese commander for privat operations, with goals far beyond the scope of Edwards understanding.In 1944 during an illegal ride in Tawinga region of British Molambe, Edwards retreating squad came across Emuru militia troop. Bosambo seized the key structures within Molambe fast and declared Etat Independent du Molambe, before the Emuru communist, still isolated internationally, could react.Libimbi, the experienced man, reacted quickly and with help of Dominican Sisters sent Edward Kazirumimba aboard. Even the secretive operations of Tawingas commissioner and Nhasa, who were keeping the diamond business hidden from the British authorities, were to his advantage.In the beginning of 1949 Libimbi and Kazirumimba began to strike Nhasa's stronghold. During the chaotic battle Edward got seized by a wounded enemy, who, hiding with him aside the battlefield put a knife on his throat preventing him to call help. After the battle, the Portuguese troops quickly slaughtered the wounded enemies and retreated back toward the Portuguese territory, leaving Edward and his seizor, who appeared to be the commander of Emuru militia and the staunch communist Jonas Libimbi, on the field. This region,in Emuru dialect,is known as Tawinga, which means 'The Hard Stone' *His father Johannes Kazirumimba, a well known chief of northern Emuru community, was convinced of slaughter of researcher group of British Royal Geologic Society and was executed in front of his people by British district commissioner in 1941. Libimbi liked young Edward and while keeping discretion about the illegal diamond market, which is the paramount coars for the poor people of Tawinga and from which Libimbi is profiting nicely, he tried to win the young man for the ideas of communism, describing the dreams of a new world where the people got enough to eat and neither Portuguese nor Brits rule, but honest men, men like Edwards father do. On this sled Edward towed Libimbi several days during the dramatic retreat into safety. And when the mountains of Tawinga provide enough money to create a new altruistic society, there should be a little more left for the creator to compensate him for the inconveniences. A sudden appearance of a son of a mighty chief who has been killed by Brits, staged in the right time might bring the Juju, necessary for the men to charge naked against the British mashineguns. Wounded Libimbi, unable to walk, tied Edward with a rope to his body, but he allowed him to burry his brother. Libimbi was strong enough to challenge Nhasa, but to take on the British commissioner ment to meddle with the British colonial system. In all lucrative top government positions Bosambo nominated the Maswe nationals, which allowed the old ethnical grievances to resurface, especially within Emuru and Lagomba nations.1965 Kazirumimba returned to Molambe via Prague and Lusanda (Garangalas capital) being celebrated by Emuru tribesmen who felt humiliated byBosambos rule. Bosambo and declaring Republique Populaire du Molambe.Edward Kazirumimba, the chairman of the Parti Communiste du Molambe, became the president of new republic, introduced new constitution and tried to reconcile the nations of Molambe to create conditions for peaceful tatebuilding. Foreign politics of Molambe shifted eastwards, with significant ties to Warsaw Pact countries. The goal of establishing one unifying leader in the whole colony failed, but counterbritish insurgency engulfed whole Molambe. Edward's uncle Nhase was appointed new chief by the district commissioner and as such was supposed to take care of Kazirumimbas family and the education of his four children. Though there was no landwide acceptance of his leadership, Kazirumimba got the whole support of the northern Emuru tribes in Tawinga. What did not work 13 years ago, became reality now: Edward Kazirumimba was the man uniting the whole Emuru nation from Lar to Jask. The Emuru nations had been joined in the fight by tribes of Lagomba and later even by Maswe. Yet another influential group of scientists is of the view, that correct translation means 'The Ace os Spades', which is from the linguistic point of view very interesting, for the nations of Emuru do not play cards, not even poker.And still some people might say the etymology is a worthless science. Meanwhile he overlooked the education of his young protegee Edward in Lamala, discussing with him at every opportunity the communist ideology. There he brought the sad news about the fate of his siblings.The further situation evolved not favorable for the communist rebels. The whole diamond business on both sides of the border is controlled by Edwards uncle Nhasa who, working for the British District commissioner, killed the British geological party years ago, making old Kazirumimba pay for this crime. Thanks to the chaotic situation in Portuguese Garangala Libimbi managed to control most of the diamond smugglers routes through the Garangala border and to Portugal. Through the Garangala smuggler channels and Portugal, Molambese communists established contacts to USSR a Czechoslovakia, getting from there a significant support, according the cold war doctrine of the communist block.Kazirumba disappeared from the eyes of the western services in USSR, joining Frunze Military Academy where he graduated in 1964. Nhase, fearing his nephews might endanger his position as chief when grown up, sold Edward, together with his sister and two brothers to one of the borderlands Maswe chiefs. In this chaotic situation Kazirumimba and Libimbi secured the diamond market in Tawinga for themselves. The same year the mine had been attacked by tribesmen from Garangala, led by Portuguese officers. The rest of the family he made believe the children have been sent to the capital to school.In Maswe the children had been torn apart and since then, Edward saw his sister never again. With the guards of the mines slaughtered, Edward, his brother and other childworkers had been taken to Portuguese territory, where both brothers were incorporated into the Portuguese colonial fighting force. Together with his brothers he was forced to work in illegal mines along the Garangala border. Libimbi took Nhasa himself by surprise and, killing all his men crucified Nhasa in front of his own house. For an action of this size, he would have need an influential chief who could field a strong Juju and unite all northern Emuru tribes under its spell. Kazirumimba declared himself a supreme chief of the Northern Emuru, son of famous chief killed by Britons in 1941. Meanwhile in Molambe Libimbi, with the help of the CSSR secret service and the 'diamond' money, was building up the forces of Parti communiste du Molambe. But some preparations had to be done. Then he ordered Edward to build a simple sled. It was than as Edward met his mother, who still lived in his home village, together with his grandmother and his father's second wife. The bloodshed between the Emuru Parti Communiste du Molambe and Bosambo's government forces culminated in April 1968 with Emuru communists charging the capital, slaughtering the government, including col. Very helpful for him was the traditional hate between the nations of Maswe and Emuru, but also the actions of Molambese government at the time. After three days the exhausted uneven pair reached a Dominican Convent of Lamala. The secret of his income source Libimbi managed to protect successfully. Kazirumimba attacked simul-taneously with main forces the residence of the British commissioner in Tawinga, who died together with his family and staff in most uncomfortable way. The Second Molambese Insurgency started in 1965 and bloody fights engulfed Molambe again. Edward Eugene KazirumimbaSex: Male Nationality: EmuruEdward Eugene Kazirumimba was born 1932 in rural settlement in the triangle of Portuguese Garangala border and tribal borderlands of Emuru and Maswe in British Molambe. Leaving the convent, Libimbi left Edward to his great disappointment, in the care of the convents sisters, for which service he payed the abbess generously.Edward did not realize, what Libimbi got from his stories. Libimbi felt the opportunity to take over the whole border diamond business.
