Capacity is 1,500, with three levels of seating, and contrary to the way it appears on 'Showtime at the Apollo,' is intimate without much legroom. Prospect Park is in many ways the Central Park of Brooklyn; in fact, it was designed shortly after by the same team of architects. Frederick Law Olmsted and Calvert Vaux, and has many of the same features: sprawling meadows, walking trails, and picturesque bodies of water. In feeling though, its more rambling and less manicured than its touristed Manhattan counterpart. Prospect Park Woodlands is Brooklyns last remaining forest, with 250 acres of trees, turtles, chipmunks, 200 species of birds, and other fauna and flora. There's also basketball and tennis courts, a carousel, playgrounds, zoo, and a 3.35-mile loop for runners and bikers (theyre fastwatch out!).
