present (present)ChronologyPreceded byAmerican Ninja ChallengeRelated showsSasuke Ultimate Beastmaster American Ninja Warrior (sometimes abbreviated as ANW) is an American Sports entertainment reality show based on the Japanese television reality show Sasuke. It features thousands of competitors attempting to complete series of obstacle courses of increasing difficulty in various cities across the United States, in hopes of advancing to the national finals on the Las Vegas Strip and becoming the season's "American Ninja Warrior." To date, only Geoff Britten, Isaac Caldiero, and Drew Drechsel have conquered Mount Midoriyama and achieved Total Victory. Caldiero and Drechsel are the only competitors to win the cash prize of $1,000,000. Britten was awarded the title of "First American Ninja Warrior" for being the first to complete all six courses (city qualifying, city finals, and four stages of Mount Midoriyama) in a single season. The series premiered on December 12, 2009, on cable channel G4, and now airs on NBC. History An American Ninja Challenge competitor in a Batman costume In late 2006, the American cable channel G4 began airing broadcasts (subtitled in English or dubbed with English or dubbed with this, the channel held the first finals and national finals episodes in the fourth season.[6] By the fifth season, G4 was set to be replaced by Esquire Network and had wound down all original programming—besides American Ninja Warrior—by January 2013. Notably, the sideboard advertising along the fifth season's courses listed Esquire Network as the broadcaster[11] because G4 was going to transition into Esquire Network by April 22, 2013—prior to the season premiere. However, the channel switch was delayed to September 23, 2013, and Esquire Network took over Style Network aired reruns until the commentator provide play-by-play on a competitor's run on the course while the sideline reporter introduces the obstacles during the beginning of the episode and interviews competitors.[14] American Ninja Warrior was originally hosted by G4's Blair Herter and Alison Haislip.[15] In the second season, comedian and television host Matt Iseman joined the show, replacing Herter. Producers were fond of his knowledge of sports and lighthearted, enthusiastic delivery. [6][16] Additionally, MMA fighter Jimmy Smith was brought in as co-host while Haislip was assigned to the new sideline reporter position. [6][17] The panel remained the same throughout season three. [18] For season four, Olympic medalist Jonny Moseley was brought in as the new color commentator, replacing Smith. Producers believed his experience as a freestyle skier would bring a unique perspective to the series. Meanwhile, sportscaster and television presenter Angela Sun replaced Haislip.[14] For season five, two newcomers were introduced. Sports analyst and former NFL player Akbar Gbaja-Biamila replaced Moseley, while ESPN sportscaster and model Jenn Brown replaced Sun as sideline reporter.[19] Gbaja-Biamila was contacted to audition for the series' executive producers.[20] The season five panel remained the same

Until Season 11, a policants could also camp outside a qualifying course and wait days or weeks to be one of the 10-30 participants selected as "walk-ons." [25] Beginning in Season 11, a lottery system was instituted to randomly select 15-20 'walk-ons' per qualifying course, the competitors that the producers have selected compete on an obstacle course consisting of six obstacles. At the beginning of each run, a buzzer sounds off and a timer begins, allowing a competitor to start the course. The first obstacle on any city qualifying course is the Quintuple Steps, Quad Steps, Floating Steps, or Shrinking Steps which competitors must run across. This is followed by four different obstacles that test a competitor's balance, upper-body strength, and grip. These five obstacles are built above water (although the balance obstacles were built above water falls into the water or touches it, their run ends immediately and the timer records their time. In the first seven seasons, the sixth and final obstacle was the 14-foot Warped Wall, in which competitors were given three chances to reach the top. In the eighth and ninth season, the Warped Wall. Competitors had only one attempt to reach the top of the Mega Wall and, if successful, they won $10,000. In the eleventh season, competitors choosing the Mega Wall who failed on their first attempt and $2,500 on their second or third attempts. Competitors are given the choice of which to climb. At the top of both walls, a competitor presses a buzzer that stops the timer and records their time, ending their run on the course. The top 30 competitors who go the farthest in the least amount of time advance to the city finals. Since the ninth season, the top five women also advance to the city finals, even if they have not finished in the top 30.[32] City finals City finals courses are the follow-up to each city qualifying course. These four obstacles are all placed after the original six obstacles. In the tenth season, two of the original six obstacles are replaced with new obstacles for the city finals course, but this was dropped in season eleven. The top 15 or 12 competitors who go the farthest in the least amount of time from each city finals course move on to the National Finals.
Since the ninth season, the top two women in each city finals course also move on to compete on the National Finals course, even if they do not finish in the top 15 or 12. Previously, many women had been granted "wildcard" slots, which allowed them to advance to the National Finals [32] Since the eighth season, small prizes ranging from $1,000 to $5,000 are awarded to first, second, and third finishers who complete the city finals course, where the top 15 competitors from the city finals course were narrowed down to 10 and then sent to Japan to compete on Sasuke.[15] In the second and third seasons, this was referred to as "boot camp" and took place at a summer camp in Simi Valley, California.[6][34] During this time, competitors trained together for multiple days and took part in pressure challenges.[17][18] With the expansion of the series in its fourth season, there was no longer a need to narrow down competitors to 10, as they were no longer being sent to Japan, and this semi-finals course was removed. [5] City timeline Location Season 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 GreaterLos Angeles, CA Venice Beach San Pedro Military venue Universal City Las Vegas, NV Finals venue Fina while none completed Stage 3.[34] David Campbell was the Last Man Standing, having been the American gone the farthest in the least amount of time on Stage 3.[6] The third season had the same format as the second season but aired in the summer. Qualifiers were held in Venice Beach in May.[40] It premiered on July 31, 2011, on G4, and concluded on August 21, 2011.[2] The finale was aired again on August 22, 2011, as a two-hour primetime special on NBC.[34] In addition to the 10 Americans sent to compete on Sasuke, one fan of ANW got the chance to compete as well. This was the result of an eBay auction in which proceeds were sent to the American Red Cross to help with recovery efforts following the 2011 Tohoku earthquake and tsunami in Japan.[14] During Sasuke 27, four of the six competitors who reached Stage 3 were American—a new record. season's NBC primetime special, the fourth season aired on MBC.[6][41] It premiered on MBC.[14][42] With an increased production budget,[6] preliminary rounds were held in three locations across the United States. Six regional competitions (Southwest, Midwest, Morthwest, Midsouth, and Southeast) took place in Venice Beach, Dallas, and Miami.[41] During the National Finals, which were held for the first time in the United States, [6][14] Brent Steffensen was the only competitor to reach Stage 3 and became the

Baltimore, Miami, and Denver.[43] In the Venice Beach qualifier, Jessie Graff became the first woman to qualify for a city finals course.[32] During the National Finals, 41-year-old Joyce Shahboz became the first woman to compete there twice in two years (as a wild card), [26] while Brian Arnold fell on the final obstacle of Stage 3 and won the title of Last Man Standing.[12] The sixth season premiered on May 26, 2014, and concluded on September 8, 2014, with original episodes airing solely on NBC. City competitions were held in Venice Beach, Dallas, St. Louis, Miami, and Denver.[42] In the Dallas qualifier, Kacy Catanzaro became the first female competitor to make it up the Warped Wall.
Later in the Dallas finals, she became the first woman to complete a city finals course. Catanzaro's two runs have been described as the first "viral moment" of the show and are credited with increasing the seventh season's submissions ten times over.[12][44] During the National Finals, Joe Moravsky fell on the antepenultimate obstacle of Stage 3[45]

As a result, only 17 competitors advanced to Stage 2—the lowest in the series' history. However, Jessie Graff became the first woman to complete Stage 1, placing fifth.[49][50] Only two athletes: Drew Drechsel and Daniel Gil, managed to beat Stage 2, but none of them completed Stage 3. Daniel Gil fell on the Ultimate Cliffhanger, while Drew fell further on the Hang Climb, and was declared the Last Man Standing.[32] The ninth season premiered on June 12, 2017, and ended on September 18, 2017. City competitions were held in Los Angeles, San Antonio, Daytona Beach, Kansas City, Cleveland, and Denver. [42] A record of 41 competitors successfully completed Stage 1 during the National Finals, including David Campbell, Ryan Stratis, Drew Drechsel, and Allyssa Beird, who became just the second woman to complete it. [49] Stage 2 saw every competitor eliminated except Joe Moravsky, Sean Bryan, and Najee Richardson. However, none of them could complete Stage 3. Bryan and Richardson fell on the Ultimate Obstacle and became the Last Man Standing.[32][37] The tenth season began airing on May 30, 2018, and ended on September 10, 2018. City

Competitors were given three chances to make it up the wall, but the prize money decreased after each attempt, starting at $10,000, then decreasing to $5,000, and finally $2,500. This season also introduced the Power Tower, where the top two finishers from each city qualifying would race on a giant metal structure to gain the "Speed Pass", which guaranteed them a spot in the National Finals. In City Finals, the Power Tower was modified, and the top two finishers would race for the "Safety Pass", which allowed them to rerun the course in either one of the first two stages (Stage 1 or Stage 2) if they fail. During the National Finals, 28 of the 86 finalists completed Stage 2, and both Drew Drechsel and Daniel Gil completed Stage 3. Daniel Gil was not able to climb it in 0:27.46 seconds, earning him the title of "Third American Ninja Warrior" and the $1,000,000 prize. 2020-present On January 22, 2020, the series was renewed for a twelfth season, which premiered on September 7, 2020. For the first time, a Spanish-language version airs on Telemundo. Qualifying cities originally included returns to Los Angeles and the season would premiere on September 7. The season, consisting of eight episodes, was filmed at The Dome at America's Center in St. Louis, Missouri; ANW was the first NBC series to have completed a full season of episodes during the current pandemic.[56] The thirteenth season consists of 12 episodes aired from May 31 to September 13, 2021.
The official age limit was 19, but it was revealed that 35 competitors between the ages of 15 and 18 were invited to compete. The season had 12 episodes, all of which were taped in the Tacoma Dome in Seattle/Tacoma, Washington. The top Pass. Those who won the Safety Pass were granted the advantage of being able to retry Stage 1 or Stage 2 if they fell on it. The four competitors who won the Safety Passes were Brian Burkhardt, Joe Moravsky, Vance Walker, and Austin Gray. The top 15 competitors and top 3 women from each semifinal episode would advance to the National Finals, which returned to Las Vegas, Nevada after not being held there the previous season due to the emerging COVID-19 pandemic. As with all of the seasons before the previous, competitors had to complete all of the obstacles of a stage on the first try in order to move on to the next stage, unless they won a Safety Pass. 68 competitors reached the National Finals, including 18 of the original 35 ninjas under 19 years old. 27 competitors completed Stage 1 and advanced to Stage 2, but Joe Moravsky had to use his Safety Pass to move on after missing the moving ring on the High Road. Another notable competitor to advance was Jesse Labreck, who, after failing the final obstacle 3 times in a row before season 12, became the first woman to advance to Stage 2 in the show's history. Only 4 of the 27 competitors completed Stage 2 in the show's history. Only 4 of the 27 competitors completed Stage 2 and advance to Stage 2 in the show's history.

Austin Gray was the only competitor of the season to have a Safety Pass, and then failed on the Epic Air Surfer. Vance Walker also failed the Double Salmon Ladder and used his Safety Pass, but he was able to then complete the stage.
Walker and Austin Gray failed on the Eyeglass Alley. Kaden Lebsack was the only competitor to finish Stage 3, and the fifth competitor to finish Stage 3 in the show's history, after Isaac Caldiero, Geoff Britten, Drew Drechsel, and Daniel Gil. But on Stage 4, Lebsack timed out about 65 feet up. In Season 13, no ninja was able to defeat Mount Midoriyama, but by going the furthest the fastest, Kaden Lebsack was declared the Last Ninja Standing and granted $100,000. The fourteenth season premiered on June 6, 2022. The season format is similar to the previous season, but the filming of 5 qualifying episodes was moved to a studio in San Antonio, Texas, with the 4 semifinals will be taped in Universal City, Los Angeles. The top 30 competitors and the top 5 women from each qualifiers advance to semifinals will advance to National Finals on Mount Midoriyama. The age limit was lowered once again to 15 years. Special episodes USA vs. The World Main article: American Ireland, the show is broadcast on Challenge and more recently on Sky Two.[89] In Israel, the show is also shown in Finland on Sub-TV. In the Netherlands the show was first broadcast in 2017 on SBS 6, where their own Ninja Warrior NL has been broadcast [92] In Norway it is broadcast on TV2 Zebra. [93] The show also airs in South Africa, on SABC 3, airing Sunday afternoons 13:30. Syndication The show is in syndicated episodes were airing a spin-off of American Ninja Warrior, which would feature 24 three-person teams (two men and one woman) of popular ANW alumni, initially titled Team Ninja Warrior. The teams compete head-to-head against each other, running the course simultaneously, thus creating a new live duel dynamic (including crossing points, where the two competitors can affect the other's progress.) The two teams with the fastest times advance to the finale, where one team will be crowned the winner and receive a cash prize. Matt Iseman and Akbar Gbaja-Biamila host alongside actor and journalist, Alex Curry. The series is Esquire Network's most-watched program in the channel's history. On May 31, 2016, Esquire Network ordered a sixteen-episode second season that also included a five-episode second season that also included a five-episode second season that Team Ninja Warrior will be moving to sibling cable channel USA Network as Esquire Network winds down its linear —entitled American Ninja Warrior Junior— was announced. Premiered on Universal Kids on October 13, 2018, Matt Iseman and Akbar Gbaja-Biamila reprised their roles from ANW as hosts, with Olympic 2016 gold medalist Elijah Browning joining as co-host, guiding competitors in head-to-head challenges. The series will feature 142 kids ages 9-14 competing along a course of miniature ANW obstacles such as the Sky hooks. Similar to ANW, males and females will run along the same course, and similarly to Ninja vs. Ninja and College Madness, competitors compete head-to-head. However, they will be divided into three age groups: 9-10, 11-12 and 13-14, with each category coached by fan-favorite athletes: Korey Kade, Lucas Gomes, Calle Alexander, Caleb Bergie, and Natalie Duran. In May 2021, it was announced that the third season would be moving to Peacock. released exclusively in North America on March 19, 2019 for PlayStation 4, Xbox One, and Nintendo Switch. It was developed by Gaming Corps Austin and published by GameMill Entertainment. The Career mode is the main mode of the game, and much like in real life, it centers around the idea of picking and training on various obstacles, participating in skills competitions, and competing in the 6 different rounds of American Ninja Warrior. The 6 rounds are the Qualifiers, the City Finals, and the 4 stages of Mount Midoriyama, Stage 2, Stage 3, and Stage 4, just like on the TV show that it is inspired by. Its Quick Play mode allows up to 4 players to compete on predetermined obstacle courses.[94][95][96][97] Obstacle and course creation This section has multiple issues. Please help improve it or discuss these issues on the talk page. Challenge." Winners of this challenge have had their obstacle featured on the course and previously have been granted tickets to the show with airline and hotel accommodations. As new creative is being invented, the obstacles are tested internally with a group of athletes to ensure the ideas are strong enough for the show and determined where they should be positioned within the overall obstacles in this grid are ranked and serve as the map for Regional Qualifiers, Regional Semi-Finals, and Series Finals to ensure difficulty and body core fairness amongst competitors. Once the obstacles have been selected, they are loaded onto semi trucks for the national regional tour.

This coordination amounts to 30+ tour shipment truck movements. When the trucks arrive the city locations they are unloaded and the TV set is constructed. The show is largely filmed within a few days time and accommodates 120-150 competitors.

new and even bigger obstacles to test the best of the best competitors. Typically held in Las Vegas, Nevada, the Series Finals set construction takes about 20 days including 6 days of initial earth moving and pool digging. This set is tested within 3 days and films for 2 days. On day 1, Stage 1 is filmed. On day 2, Stage 2, 3 and 4 are filmed. Additional days are added for any Specials that may also be scheduled. After filming, the main course is deconstructed in 2.5 days. See also Spartan: Ultimate Team Challenge - American competition reality television show Notes ^ Geoff Britten and Isaac Caldiero both completed Stage 4 in under 30 seconds and achieved Total Victory. Britten completed Stage 4 in 0:29.65 seconds, earning the title of "First American Ninja Warrior" for being the first to complete all six courses (city qualifying, city finals, and four stages of Mount Midoriyama) in a single season, and Caldiero completed
